

The 2018 March for Science

March 15, 2018

Join your fellow sociologists for the 2nd annual March for Science on April 14, 2018.

In 2017, more than one million people around the world gathered together in the largest event for science advocacy in history, the March for Science. The March for Science is a public celebration of science and a reminder of the important role evidence-based research plays in informing public policy.

The primary event will take place in Washington, DC, and there are already 175 satellite events planned. To find the event closest to you, see the March for Science webpage.

We have printable signs for you to download, print, and carry at the march. These slogans were the result of a crowdsourcing effort for last year's march. Thank you to Liz Hoisington, Paula England, and @socialscinerd.

- Good Public Policy Needs Sociology
- Sociology: The Science of Us
- Are Marches Effective? Ask a Sociologist

Social Media: We encourage sociologists everywhere to join the march in DC or your closest satellite location. Please use the hashtag #March4Sociology and tag the ASA in your social media posts so we can share them. Facebook: AmericanSociologicalAssociation. Twitter: @ASANews

Want to join other scientists? Check out March for Science activities hosted by AAAS