Land Acknowledgement and Recognition

Before we can talk about sociology, power, inequality, we must acknowledge that the land on which we gather is the traditional and unceded territory of the Ramaytush Ohlone (pronounced Rah-my-toosh O-lone-ee). We, the American Sociological Association (ASA), acknowledge that academic institutions, indeed the nation-state itself, was founded upon and continues to enact exclusions and erasures of Indigenous Peoples. This acknowledgement demonstrates a commitment to beginning the process of working to dismantle ongoing legacies of settler colonialism, and to recognize the hundreds of Indigenous Nations who continue to resist, live, and uphold their sacred relations across their lands. We also pay our respect to Indigenous elders past, present, and future and to those who have stewarded this land throughout the generations.

Welcome from the ASA President

Christine Williams

ASA President

University of Texas at Austin

Two years ago, I convened a Program Committee to brainstorm ideas for the 2020 conference. We knew it was going to be an important one for ASA members, as it would be the year of the Presidential Election, the decennial census, and the 100th anniversary of women's suffrage. But we could not anticipate the two cataclysmic events of the year: the COVID-19 pandemic that sickened and killed our friends, family members, and colleagues around the world, causing the cancellation of the meeting; and the massive protests against racist police violence in response to the brutal murders of George Floyd, Breonna Taylor, and many others. I am convinced that the world needs sociology more than ever, but sociology will never be the same as a result. Now is the time for sociologists to rededicate ourselves to fighting social injustice in all its forms.

The decision to cancel the San Francisco meeting was not a difficult one to make, but moving to an online event has been difficult, requiring the dedicated service of many people. I want to express my sincere appreciation for their efforts to make ASA 2020 a meaningful and enriching experience.

The staff at ASA have been working overtime to manage the transition while looking out for the best interests of the Association. After two years of nearly daily communications with them, I can assure members that our Association is in professional and responsible hands.

The elected ASA Council has been a source of wisdom, support, and hope to me during these challenging times. I am especially grateful to have the opportunity to serve with Vice President Joya Misra, whose wise feminist counsel I cherish.

The tireless Program Committee did their job twice, first organizing a spectacular program, and then reorganizing it as a virtual event. I was told at the beginning of my term that programming the conference would be the best part of being President, and that was no lie, thanks to this wonderful group of scholars and educators.

Joya Misra, Vice President, University of Massachusetts, Amherst

David Takeuchi, Past Secretary, Boston College

Nancy Lopez, Secretary, University of New Mexico

Don Tomaskovic-Devey, University of Massachusetts, Amherst

My local arrangements chairperson, Katrina E. Kimport, working with Kimberly Richman and Josh Gamson, put together a fabulous line-up of sessions and tours to spotlight the sociological significance of the San Francisco Bay Area. I am extremely grateful for their efforts, and disappointed that we are not there to enjoy the results together.

Finally, I want to thank the ASA members who generously and graciously worked to make this online event possible. I am grateful to the section officers, session organizers, presenters, discussants, moderators, and attendees who came together to make ASA 2020 an unforgettable experience.

Although we are not meeting physically this year, I welcome you to join our virtual event, and hope you find inspiration and insight relevant to the times we find ourselves in.

ASA is pleased to acknowledge

4:30-6:00pm

Presider: Allison Pugh, University of Virginia

Panelists: Ruha Benjamin, Princeton University; Tressie Cottom, Virginia Commonwealth University; Anita Sarkeesian, Feminist Frequency

Session Organizer: Allison Pugh, University of Virginia

Tech has a justice problem, and three prominent scholar-activists come together here to talk about it. Ruha Benjamin's work helps to expose inequalities in how technology is made. An associate professor at Princeton University, Benjamin is the author of Race After Technology: Abolitionist Tools for the New Jim Code, a book about machine bias, discriminatory design, and liberatory approaches to technoscience. She has written two other books and many articles that diagnose and explain racism in science and technology, and has been published in Science, the Annals of the American Academy of Political and Social Science, and Theory and Society. Her work has been covered by Nature, the Washington Post, NPR and a host of other venues, and funded by the American Council of Learned Societies, National Science Foundation, and the Institute for Advanced Study. Anita Sarkeesian is an award-winning media critic, whose efforts to wrest gaming culture from misogyny brought her both positive attention and extraordinary harassment. Her website Feminist Frequency has analyzed representations of women in popular culture since 2009; she has been named one of Time's 100 Most Influential People in the World, and received an honorary PhD from the New School. Tressie McMillan Cottom is the author of four books, including Thick, a collection of essays that was a finalist for the National Book Award, as well as the popular edited volume Digital Sociologies, co-edited with Karen Gregory and Jessie Daniels. She has also written about Black cyberfeminism, algorithmic inequalities and the uses of technology in education and other fields. McMillan Cottom has won multiple awards, including several outstanding early career awards, as well as the 2020 ASA Public Understanding of Sociology Award and the 2017 SWS Feminist Activist Scholar Award. In this event, Benjamin, Sarkeesian and McMillan Cottom will each speak for ten minutes, and then participate in a Q&A session moderated by Allison Pugh, a University of Virginia professor of sociology who is writing a book about person-to-person work, technology, and the stratification of human contact.

At the top levels of most organizations, racial and gender diversity is virtually nonexistent. There are more men named John running large companies than there are women, and a paltry three black CEOs heading Fortune 500 companies (none of whom are women). With demographic changes looming in the nation and labor force, however, many organizations now state their commitment to achieving workforce diversity. But realizing this goal has proven elusive. Why is it that even as organizations tout their commitment to greater racial and gender diversity, they remain largely unable to translate these goals into results? Who, if anyone, is doing the work to diversify organizations, and what sort of systemic barriers do they confront? What efforts are necessary to diversify organizations throughout, and not just among leadership? Using a panel discussion format, this session will be a conversation about how diversity work has become commonplace in many organizations, what it means to do this work, and why the outcomes so often fall short. Panelists will consider both the work that gets done to create more organizational diversity as well as the implications for the workers tasked with this labor.
