MAY/JUNE 2000

2000 Annual Meeting: August 12-16, 2000 A Vibrant Latino Presence in Washington, DC

by Rose Ann M. Rentería¹

Latino migration into the Washington, DC area consists of several waves. For example, civil wars in Central America during the 1980s and 1990s pushed many Salvadorans, Guatemalans, and Nicaraguans into the area. The Andean drought of the 1970-1980s prompted Peruvians and Bolivians to relocate, and revolutions in the Caribbean in the last 1950s and 1960s transported Cubans and Dominicans. Today, nearly 60% of Latino immigrants in the Washington, D.C. area identify themselves as Central Americans, and about 31 percent describe themselves as Salvadorans.² Nonetheless, the Latino population remains quite diverse and the distribution of nationalities tends to vary from the rest of the nation (Table 1).

Growth of the Washington area Latino population remains an important issue. According to the U.S. Census, the Latino population in the Washington, DC-MD-VA Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA), has grown from 223,067, according to the 1990 Census, to an estimated 330,544 Latinos in 1998, an increase of 48 percent (Table 2).³ In 1998, the Census estimated that 9,770 Latinos lived in Arlington

County, representing over 18% of county's total population, and between 1990 and 1998, both Montgomery County, MD, and Fairfax County, VA, had over 30,000 new Latinos residents in their respective areas (See Table 2). In particular, two localities experienced dramatic growth in the Hispanic population during the 1990s: Prince William County, VA, and Manassas City, VA, as noted in Table 2. Growth among youth in public schools has also occurred. Recently, the Washington Post reported that the City of Alexandria, VA, had more Latino students than non-Latino whites; Montgomery County, MD, had 15% Latino students, and Prince William County's (VA) Latino student enrollment had increased by 16% in 1998.⁴

1999 Survey

In the summer of 1999, the Washington Post, the Henry J. Kaiser Family Foundation, and Harvard University's School of Public Health conducted a locally representative telephone survey (in English and Spanish), which included 603 self-identified Latino adults in the Washington, D.C. metropolitan area, along with 309 D.C. area non-Latinos.⁵ The survey found that three out of four Latino adults in the area are foreign-born, most have lived in the U.S. for about 12 years, fewer than half of the area's Latinos are U.S. citizens, and more than one third have voted in their native country since coming to the U.S. The area's Latinos also tend to be less educated and make less money than the rest of the population in the area. The lower education levels are partially due to immigrants from Central American who arrived during the 1980s and 1990s.

The survey showed that Latinos are two times more likely than the population at large to have a family member working two jobs to make ends meet, and that Latino students have the highest dropout rates of any ethnic group in many Washington area schools. In terms of language usage, 40% of the respondents said they are able to read English only a little, or not at all, and 40% said that they communicate only in Spanish. The dominance of Spanish has prompted most counties and cities to respond. Some hospitals, police departments, court systems, and public schools now actively recruit Spanish-speaking staff. In Virginia, Arlington County's YMCA offers free classes for adult English as a second language classes. Area colleges in Maryland and Virginia do the same. However, waiting lists are often the norm. Interestingly, the survey revealed that the majority of the Washington area Latinos have favorable views of government, police, schools, and other institutions. This was true even though nearly half of the Latinos surveyed said that they or someone they know had experienced discrimination.

Community Issues

Growth issues along with the gentrification of predominately Latino neighborhoods are of particular importance to Latinos residing in Washington, D.C. The Council of Latino Agencies, formed in 1976, currently has 35 member agencies in Washington, D.C. The Council and its member agencies respond to a number of critical issues for Latinos in the District, including amnesty and immigrant rights, client's fears of deportation, Latino leadership, housing and legal service for clients, domestic violence and ensuring an accurate Census count in 2000. In particular, the Council works closely with Latino residents in the Adams Morgan, Columbia Heights, and

A Dream Team

Perrucci, Miller, and Contemporary Sociology

JoAnn Miller

Robert Perrucci

Robert Perrucci and JoAnn Miller, scholar-warriors of Purdue University, will assume editorial command of Contemporary Sociology at the turn of the real 21st century. In an era where mainstream media and conventional scholarship too often appear entranced by TINA (there is no alternative) and focused on "Muggles" (mass consumption drones oblivious to their circumscribed lives in J.K. Rowling's Harry Potter books), Bob and JoAnn stand a world apart. As seasoned sociological veterans, they bring to their CS editorship a battle-tested commitment to critical thought, scholarly diversity, and open inquiry. They also bring a keen appreciation of sociology's scholarly foundations and a deep commitment to encouraging new developments in the field.

Bob and JoAnn have impressive (and progressive) professional credentials. Bob's interests in work, social class, organizations, and political economy have led to 14 books, over 70 articles/book chapters, and dozens of papers. His most recent books include The New Class Society (1999, with Earl Wysong) and Science Under Siege? Interest Groups and the Science Wars (2000, with Lee Trachtman). JoAnn's focus on law, family violence, and social problems has led to four books, 29 articles/book chapters, and numerous papers. She is currently working on a new book, Love Hurts: The State's Response to Partner Abuse, based in part on her research as a Fellow in Law and Sociology at the Harvard Law School, 1999-2000. Their work has been supported in part by numerous grants from various sources totaling over $1 million. Besides being very productive researchers, Bob and JoAnn have also served as consummate mentors for many graduate students. Their continuing efforts to nurture, nudge, challenge, and promote the brightest new lights in sociology are understated in the c.v. listings of their "professional achievements." Even so, their contributions in this area have been (and remain) critically important to nourishing the discipline.

Within the field, Bob and JoAnn are active professional leaders. Bob is currently President of the Society for the Study of Social Problems (SSSP). In the past his posts have included, for example, SSSP vice president (1996-97), ASA Committee on Nominations (1988-89), ASA Organization and Occupation Section Chair (1982-83), and North Central Sociological Association (NCSA) President (1973-74). JoAnn is currently SSSP program Co-Chair. She has served as the SSSP Law and Society Division Chair (1996-98) and as a member of the Council of Division Chairs Nominating Committee. In 1989 JoAnn was co-organizer (with Dean Knudsen) of a nationwide conference on "Responses to Family Violence: A Research Conference." In the world of publications, their professional involvement includes numerous editorial posts. A sampling includes Bob's service as editor of The American Sociologist and Social Problems, associate editor of the American Sociological Review, Social Problems, Contemporary Sociology, Sociological Quarterly, Sociological Focus, and membership on the Contemporary Sociology editorial board. JoAnn has served as deputy editor of Social Problems, editor of Pro Bono (SSSP

The Executive Officer's Column

ASA's Member Forum: Join the Talk

The Executive Office staff is in high gear preparations for the 2000 Annual Meeting. The exciting program, summarized in this issue of Footnotes, captures the intellectual vitality of the field and the vision of President Feagin and his Program Committee. While this is the third year that the Preliminary Program is on the ASA homepage (<http://www.asanet.org>) reaching members and other interested persons, we now have a more powerful full-text search engine that provides much more capacity to "ask" questions and "get" answers about the meeting. This approach is just one of the many ways in which the Executive Office has tried to enhance member communications electronically.

Key to our effort is working with sections. With Association support, all sections have listservs to enhance the exchange of ideas among their members and to broadcast timely and relevant information from section officers to their members. About 30 percent of the sections have quite active listservs that strengthen communication and ties among members. I hope by now members have also had the opportunity to visit the ASA member-only area on the ASA homepage. The member-only space includes a searchable e-mail directory of ASA members, the Directory of Sociology Departments, and the Directory of Aligned Associations. Also, members can verify and change their contact information electronically! By the end of June, Chairs whose departments are Department Affiliates will have access to the member-only area to help connect them to information that they as department chairs should have.

During the July 1999 meeting of the Committee on the Executive Office and Budget (EOB), then President-elect Feagin asked that an open discussion of member communication be on the agenda. Part of that discussion included consideration of the possibility and merits of using internet-based forums, such as discussion groups or chat-rooms and the advantages, disadvantages, and complexities of utilizing the internet to generate discussion, build communication among sociologists, and facilitate communication between the ASA leadership, the ASA Executive Office, and ASA members. EOB's initial conversation was exploratory, with lots of different issues providing "food for thought."

The 1999 Annual Meeting, with its packed business meeting and subsequent letters to Footnotes, only furthered the desire of President Feagin and the Council to offer additional ways for members to communicate their views and to talk among each other about important issues facing the Association and the profession. At its 2000 January meeting, Council concluded that an open forum for member discussion could be useful and that the Association should give members (who chose to do so) the capacity to talk with one another. Council passed the following motion:

Motion: That ASA introduce, under the aegis of the Executive Office, a Members' Forum on the ASA homepage in the member-only area, and that ASA reaffirm that the section listservs should stimulate specialized communication within subfields of sociology.
Carried.

How will it work? By July, it will be time to take a look. With Council's support, we have decided to launch this effort with threaded discussions around topics to be considered at the Annual Meeting. Ultimately we see the Forum as a virtual meeting place for members (members-only) throughout the year. Our hope, at least initially, is to identify and select topics for continuing "threaded discussion." While the structure of these discussions as well as the discussions themselves will be member-driven, topics will be posted to ensure that there is quality discussion around wide ranging subjects. For each identified area, a member with interests in the topic will be designated as a moderator to lead and take part.

The Member Forum aspires to use technology to promote substantive exchange among members, to generate discussion on key issues or even nascent ideas, and to provide a vehicle where the leadership of the Association can hear directly from members about what they like, seek, and need. It makes sense to start this effort leading up to the Annual Meeting. For learned societies like ASA, the Annual Meeting is the most visible, collective ritual to communicate substantive ideas and develop or reaffirm collegial exchange. Through the Forum, we are now well positioned to view this event as a "peak" moment in a more continuous cycle of interactions.

As we think about the best of what happens at our Annual Meeting, I am pleased that the interactions there can now extend far into the year. Through the Forum, our members can and are encouraged to remain engaged in the Association. Some threaded discussions will reach their natural endings, and others will be launched. But all of these discussions should contribute to our being better connected with current sociological issues and ideas. For members, this is a valuable opportunity to learn and to add your perspectives. For the Association, both those elected and selected to serve can now do so more effectively for having logged on and listened. I too look forward not only to seeing you in August but to being with you in cyber space.—Felice J. Levine

Larry Burmeister Selected as Next Congressional Fellow

Larry Burmeister, Professor of Rural Sociology at the University of Kentucky, has been selected as the 2000 ASA Congressional Fellow. Starting in January 2001, he will work for six months on the staff of a congressional office in Washington, DC.

Larry Burmeister

Burmeister has extensive experience in applied sociology and agricultural policy work. He is presently working as a co-researcher on a USDA regional research project dealing with public perceptions about and reactions to the globalization of our agri-food system. Another interest centers on East Asian agricultural and rural development issues, with recent sabbatical work in Korea studying the social economy of rice. On going trade liberalization has had an impact on East Asian agriculture, as well as on U.S. farmers. Recent passage of the "Freedom to Farm" legislation and its impacts on independent, family farmers, as well as farm working conditions and "safety nets" are all topics on which Burmeister's expertise can be helpful. In the town of acronyms, he can converse about such matters as GMOs (genetically modified organisms) and CAFOs (confined animal feeding operations). From his PhD work at Cornell to his current position at Kentucky, Burmeister embraces the land grant mission and the need to show the usefulness of sociological research. Now he moves from state level policies and politics to the federal level, with a possible placement as a staff member on a House or Senate agricultural committee . . . after the November election.

The ASA Congressional Fellowship is an opportunity for a sociologist to work on a congressional staff to learn about the policy making process, and to hone skills in linking sociology to policy relevant topics. Prior Fellows have included Catherine White Berheide, Skidmore College; Peter Cookson, Jr., Columbia University; Jill S. Quadagno, Florida State University; Richard J. Gelles, University of Rhode Island; Nora Jacobson, Johns Hopkins University; and Lois Monteiro, Brown University. The 1999 fellow, Rachel Gragg, has joined the staff of Sen. Paul Wellstone (D-MN) where she did her placement. The current fellow, George Dowdall, is working in Senator Biden's office (D-DE). In addition to serving on a staff, the Fellow often spends some time in the ASA executive office preparing briefing materials, participating in a Congressional or media briefing on a timely topic, and writing Footnotes stories. The ASA's Spivack Program on Applied Social Research and Social Policy administers the Fellowship. The next deadline is February 1, 2001 with all application information on the homepage. □

Rachel Rinaldo Selected Fourth ASA-AAAS Media Fellow

Rachel Rinaldo, a graduate student in sociology at University of Chicago, has been selected as the fourth ASA-AAAS Media Fellow. ASA collaborates with the American Association for the Advancement of Science (AAAS) to sponsor a sociologist in a summer placement with a media organization. After a training and orientation session in early June in Washington, DC, with more than a dozen other AAAS Science Fellows, Rinaldo will begin a ten-week placement.

Rinaldo's interests center on ethnography, cultural sociology, and participatory action research. The graduate faculty who strongly recommended her noted her breadth of knowledge in sociology (and aligned fields) and lack of overspecialization. Her experience with and study of documentary and feature films provides an additional dimension to print journalism. She was involved in the production of a documentary film entitled "Maxwell Street Blues" about the efforts to preserve historic Maxwell Street in Chicago. She co-produces and anchors the Direct Action News, a monthly news program covering demonstrations and protests around the world, which is distributed nationally by Free Speech TV, as well as being available on the Internet.

"I have always been interested in journalism, and in fact, arrived at sociology through journalism," says Rinaldo. My editorial job at Stagebill Magazine and my attempts at freelance writing after [Barnard] college convinced me that I needed a more thorough background in social science to help me understand and explain social issues."

"I also believe there is a natural affinity between sociology and journalism. Both disciplines strive to describe and interpret people's actions and beliefs. Robert Park, a founder of sociology, began his career as a journalist . . . I hope to inject some academic substance into journalism, as well as enrich sociological research and writing with journalistic clarity and a reporter's attention to the lived experience of people."

Before she begins her placement, she will help organize the Second Annual Sociological Ethnography Conference in Chicago.

After their summer placement, Fellows are expected to write for Footnotes and the media, and to participate in the Annual Meeting. This media fellowship is an initiative of the Spivack Program in Applied Social Research and Social Policy. The goal is to better prepare sociologists to emphasize public communication and public understanding in their professional work. The next deadline for applications is February 1, 2001. □

PUBLIC AFFAIRS UPDATE

✓ Take Note of Potential Changes to 2000 PUMS . . . The Census Bureau is assessing whether to reduce the subject and geographic detail for the Public Use Microdata Samples (PUMS) of the Census 2000. Alterations could threaten the quality of data for social science research and policy. Discussion focuses on strategies to reduce risk to respondent confidentiality without compromising data quality. For further information, see the Task Force on the 2000 PUMS at <http://www.ipums.umn.edu/> or contact Steven Ruggles, Chair of the ICPSR Census 2000 Advisory Committee at ruggles@hist.umn.edu. Ruggles is coordinating this effort.

✓ OMB Issues Guidance on Tabulating Race Data . . . In March, Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Director Jacob Lew issued further guidance to Federal agencies on tabulating race under its revised standards. Lew indicated that the Census Bureau would publish the full range of 63 possible single and multiple race responses from the Census 2000 questionnaire. Multiple race responses will be allocated in several ways for civil rights monitoring and enforcement: combinations of one minority race and "White" will be allocated to the minority race; combinations that include two or more minority races will be allocated to the race that is cited as the basis for discrimination (in the case of an individual complaint of discrimination). Finally, in discrimination cases that require an assessment of disparate impact or discriminatory patterns, the enforcement agency will review the patterns based on alternative allocations to each of the minority groups reported. In 1997, OMB modified its policy for collecting Federal data on race and ethnicity by allowing individuals to select more than one race. For more information, contact OMB's Office of Information and Regulatory Affairs/Statistical Policy Office at (202) 395-3093.

✓ Duster and Wilson selected as NIH Director's Lecturers . . . Sociologists Troy Duster (New York University and University of California-Berkeley) and William Julius Wilson (Harvard University) have been named as two of the coveted "Director's Lecturers" at the National Institutes of Health (NIH) for 2001. . . . an important high profile for sociological work!

✓ NIJ Getting the Word Out on Crime Research . . . The National Institute of Justice (NIJ), known for its attention to dissemination of research and data, launched a new journal, The NIJ Research Review. To be published quarterly, it will feature short summaries of significant research and findings and other important and timely information. For more information, see http://www.ojp.usdoj.gov/nij/rrvol1_1/index.html.

✓ NIH Puts New Human Subjects Review Policy in Place . . . Starting with applications in June/July 2000, the NIH has streamlined procedures for the submission of proposals. Institutional Review Board (IRB) approval does not need to be obtained prior to proposal review. Researchers who learn that their proposals have priority scores in the fundable range can proceed with IRB review if approval was not previously granted. The change is seen as reducing the burden on researchers and reviewers until it is relevant to do so.

✓ Speaking of IRBs . . . Thanks for the response to the call in April Footnotes and on the ASA homepage (<http://www.asanet.org>) for sociologists' experiences serving on or being reviewed by IRBs. Submissions can be submitted electronically and are still encouraged. On a related issue, the Office of Inspector General at the Department of Health and Human Services released a report in April 2000 on the status of responses to its recommendations to NIH and the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) on Protecting Human Research Subjects. The report is available at <http://www.dhhs.gov/progorg/oei> or by calling (617) 565-1050.

ASA Past-President Portes Elected to National Academy of Sciences

The National Academy of Sciences announced on May 2 the election of 60 new members and 15 foreign associates from nine countries in recognition of their distinguished and continuing achievements in original research.

One of those elected was ASA Past-President Alejandro Portes. Dr. Portes is currently professor of sociology at Princeton University.

The election was held during the business session of the 137th annual meeting of the Academy. Election to membership in the Academy is considered one of the highest honors that can be accorded a U.S. scientist or engineer. Those elected bring the total number of active members to 1,843.

The National Academy of Sciences is a private organization of scientists and engineers dedicated to the furtherance of science and its use for the general welfare. The Academy was established in 1863 by a congressional act of incorporation, signed by Abraham Lincoln, that calls on the Academy to act as an official adviser to the federal government, upon request, in any matter of science or technology.

Additional information about the institution is available on the Internet at <http://national-academies.org>. A full directory of NAS members can be found online at <http://national-academies.org/nas>. □

Nebraska-Lincoln and Tulane Celebrate Centennials

Sociology at Nebraska-Lincoln is 100 Years Old in 2000

by Mary Jo Deegan, University of Nebraska-Lincoln

The Department of Sociology at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln is pleased to announce our hundredth birthday, and our centennial celebration started our birthday year with a bang. Although our department officially began in 1900, sociology courses were taught here as early as 1885. Past and present faculty, students, and staff as well as their friends and family came together for a time of remembrance and reflection on March 3rd and 4th, 2000. Dozens of people sent in anecdotes, memories, and pictures to help record the past. These were posted on "memory boards" that were a hit throughout the event.

We began with a pre-conference in the morning on March 3rd with tours of the Gallup Research Center, where Allan L. McCutcheon, a member of our department, is the Director. The department hosted an open house in the afternoon where our "seminar room" sported an unusually festive air. Family, friends and former students gathered for a memorial meeting for our late colleague Nicholas Babchuk, and they said a final group good-bye to remember his long service to the department and discipline.

Joe R. Feagin, President of the American Sociological Association, graciously spent the day with us and presented two stirring speeches. His first address, co-sponsored by the Ethnic Studies Institute directed by Thomas C. Calhoun, also a member of our department, discussed "White Racism" and the historical basis of white privilege in the United States. The audience in the jam-packed room continued to talk for over an hour after the event to examine further facets of this discussion. President Feagin's talk was proceeded and followed by meetings with interested colleagues and students who wanted to discuss his work and their own with him.

In the evening, President Feagin once again gave a stimulating talk to another enthusiastic crowd. His analysis of "Social Realities and the Future of Sociology" examined national and global crises of modern capitalism and their challenges to the practice of sociology. This was the kick-off to the official celebration and over 90 people listened to his keynote address. This event was proceeded by short speeches opening the conference, including one by J. Allen Williams, chair of the department, summarizing some of our awards and accomplishments of the past decade.

Saturday, March 4, began on a high note, too. Alan Bates, who came to UNL as a faculty member in 1949, shared his memories of the 1950s to the late 1970s with us, including the changes brought by our increasing growth and diversification. Alan Booth (PhD 1966, faculty 1965-1990), now at Pennsylvania State University, shared his memories from the mid-1960s to the 1990s and the early establishment of our Bureau of Sociological Research in 1965. Mary Jo Deegan outlined the early development of the Nebraska School of Sociology fueled by the presence of three scholars who became ASA presidents: Charles Elwood, E.A. Ross, and George E. Howard. Michael R. Hill, PhD 1989 and Editor of Sociological Origins, who compiled a bibliography of the 254 master's and 171 doctoral dissertations completed in the department, discussed the structural and bibliographical intricacies involved in assembling such a list.

Charles Harper, PhD, 1967 and Professor at Creighton University, and Bruce Keith, PhD 1990 and Associate Dean at West Point, Annapolis, MD, reminisced about students life during these different eras. Wayne Wheeler, MA 1948 and Professor Emeritus at the University of Nebraska-Omaha, recalled many capers in post-war UNL that vividly brought back the times and the people.

Keith Parker, a member of our department since 1989 and now Assistant Dean of Graduate Studies at UNL, and Jack Seigman, a member of our department since 1966, led a roundtable discussion on the impact of the 1960s on sociology. Sociologists' active leadership in many social movements during this period fundamentally changed individual lives, the discipline, and the nature of public social issues.

Present and former undergraduates, including Todd Schroer, BA 1990, PhD 1998 and Instructor in our department, Edward Munoz, BA 1990, MA 1992, PhD, 1996 and Assistant Professor at Iowa State University, Cindy Lange-Kubick, undergraduate student in the mid 1990s and columnist for the Lincoln Journal Star, and Jenny Kane, a present undergraduate student and member of our student association, talked about the contemporary influences of UNL on their lives. A final panel on the future of sociology in the department was presented by Lynn White (on the faculty since 1974 and the present chair of the Graduate Committee), Helen Moore (on the faculty since 1979 and the present chair of the Undergraduate Committee), and Frieda Fowler, President of the Nebraska Association of Sociology Graduate students. They pointed to our continuing strengths and we discussed the recent sizable increase in undergraduate majors that puts new demands on our faculty and program.

The whirlwind of activities continued informally Saturday evening when Michele Miller, PhD 1998 and Assistant Professor of Criminology at the University of Nebraska-Omaha, and Robert Benford, Professor of Sociology at UNL and on the faculty since 1987, opened their home for a delightful party. Once again old and new friends mingled to share stories and make new memories.

Gail Jackson Snell Fullerton, a family relation to George Howard, a UNL sociology graduate (MA, 1950), and President Emerita of San Jose State University, was able to join a few of us the next week when she donated several important Nebraska books to the university archives including Howard's personal copy of his three volume A History of Matrimonial Institutions Chiefly in England and the United States.

Our hard-working centennial committee included myself as chair and the following members: Robert Benford, Jack Seigman, Ana Marie Wahl, and Hugh Whitt. We anticipate an exciting new century of accomplishments at our next centennial in 3000. Photographs from the centennial are available at our website: <http://www.unl.edu/unlsoc>, and a CD is being prepared using a powerpoint program. □

Tulane's Sociology Department Celebrates 100th Anniversary

by James D. Wright, Tulane University

The Department of Sociology at Tulane University celebrated the 100th anniversary of its founding with a gala reception and giant crawfish boil on April 22, 2000, an event held in conjunction with the annual meetings of the Southern Sociological Society in New Orleans.

About 250 faculty, students, guests, and friends of the department joined in the celebration on Tulane's Uptown campus for an evening of Louisiana mud bugs, jambalaya, and a big helping of funky N'Awlins blues from the Jay Monque D' Blues Band.

A formal course of study in sociology at Tulane dates to 1895, when John R. Ficklen, Professor of History and Political Science, offered a course entitled Principles of Sociology. To honor its founder, the department awards an annual Ficklen Prize to an undergraduate major of high academic standing with a distinguished record of community service. In addition to the Ficklen prize, the department annually bestows two other awards to outstanding undergraduates, the Shelley W. Coverman Award for research best exemplifying the spirit of the late Professor Coverman's research on women and the Phi Mu Award for the outstanding sociology graduate.

The founding of the modern department dates to 1900 with the hiring of Dr. Morton Aldrich, Professor of Economics and Sociology. Under Aldrich's leadership, the department evolved into the College of Commerce and Business Administration, the precursor to today's School of Business. Tulane's second sociologist, Dr. Garrett Wyckoff was brought in from Grinnell in 1918 to develop a program of applied sociology. That program became the Southern School of Social Sciences and Public Welfare, which later evolved into the University's School of Social Work, the first professional school of social work in the South.

In its 100-year history, the department's faculty has included five scholars who went on to become Presidents of the American Sociological Association: Edward Brown Reuter, Luther Bernard, Ellsworth Faris, Louis Wirth, and Robert K. Merton.

Presently, Tulane sociology has fifteen full-time faculty, a number of adjunct faculty, about 30 graduate students in residence and actively pursuing advanced degrees, and 150 undergraduate majors. The department serves as the editorial home of Social Science Research, a quarterly journal published by Academic Press.

Seven Projects Receive ASA-NSF Small Grant Awards

The American Sociological Association (ASA) is pleased to announce seven recipients from the winter 1999-2000 award round of the Fund for the Advancement of the Discipline (FAD). The FAD program is jointly funded through a matching grant provided to the ASA by the National Science Foundation (NSF). These awards are designed to provide scholars with venture capital for innovative research projects and collaborative networks that culminate in scholarly work that challenges and advances sociology as a discipline. This round of award winners include:

- Julia Adams (University of Michigan), Elisabeth Clemens (University of Arizona), and Ann Orloff (Northwestern University) $4,910 for The Making and Unmaking of Modernity: Politics and Process in Historical Sociology. These funds will be used for a small working conference to assess new challenges to theories of long-term social change. The conference is the outgrowth of an ongoing dialogue among a group of researchers active in comparative-historical sociology. Conference participants will evaluate the scope, topics, methods, and value of this subfield. They will focus especially on methodological critiques of comparative methods, claims against narratives of progress and modernity made by post-structuralist and post-modernist theory, and forms of structure and action implicated in relations of power. To grapple with these issues, conference participants have begun to work on a series of individual chapters that will culminate in an edited volume. Chapter topics include agency, state formation, the politics of reproduction and family, nationalism and racial/ethnic identities, secularization, transitions to capital, social provision, democratization and citizenship, revolution, and politics and the rise of markets.
- April Brayfield, Tulane University, $4,430 for Challenging the Discipline: An Expose of the Sociological Study of Children in High-Profile Journals. These funds will be used to investigate how sociologists have conceptualize childhood over time. It asks whether the new research that studies the structure of childhood and the agency of children has replaced "top-down" socialization theory in sociology journals. The Principal Investigator (PI) will conduct a meta-analysis of the entire time span four flagship journals, each representing an important professional association. The journals include the American Sociological Review, Gender & Society, the Journal of Marriage and the Family, and Social Problems. As part of the meta-analysis, the PI will code the presence or absence of a series of child-related variables such as sibling, parent, daycare, play, and school, one that describes the study methodology, and one that describes whether the focus of the article is child—rather than parent or adult-centered. The PI will construct a cognitive map based on the results. By studying changing ideological conceptions and methodological practices in studying childhood, the PI hopes that the resulting map will reveal further how sociologists think about core concepts of social structure, human agency, and social change. Along with scholarly manuscripts, the results of this study will be available on the web and provided to relevant association newsletters.

- Phillip Cohen, University of California-Irvine, $4,850 for Black-White Differences in the Determinants of Women's Labor Force Activity, 1976-1999: Causes and Consequences. This project investigates the determinants of Black and White women's labor force activity over the last three decades. Economists and sociologists have not, as yet, adequately examined the causes and consequences of significant Black/White differences. The Principal Investigator hopes to fill this gap in the study of these differences by employing the Current Population Survey and the 1990 Census to develop measures of household relations (especially non-marital cohabitation and multigenerational structures) and metropolitan area labor markets. The results of this project, including tabulations of labor force participation across individual, family, and household characteristics as well as computer codes, test results and comparisons using the measures developed will be available on the University of California, Irvine's web site.
- John Foran, University of California-Santa Barbara, $5,000 for The Future of Revolutions in the Context of Globalization. These funds will be used to support a conference, that examines two questions: first, whether it has gotten harder for revolutions to occur in a world of global corporations, global cultural forms, instantaneous communications, and the demise of the Soviet Union; and second, what might future revolutions look like. Conference participants, including junior and senior scholars, will explore the power of diverse theories to predict previous revolutions, current revolutions, and those that might occur in the future. During the conference, participants will jointly examine cases in which revolutions were expected to occur but did not, cases of unsuccessful uprisings, successful cases, and cases of revolutions in progress in African, Asia, Latin American and the Middle East. The conference will result in an edited volume titled, The Future of Revolutions in a Globalizing Economy.
- Lisa Keister, Ohio State University, $5,000 for Wealth Mobility in the United States: A Proposal to Study Long-Term Patterns. These funds will be used for a longitudinal study of wealth mobility in the United States. Wealth ownership has become increasingly concentrated and wealth inequality is more severe and has more deleterious consequences than other aspects of inequality. Yet, relatively little is known about the processes of wealth mobility. The Principal Investigator will begin this effort by gathering and synthesizing archival data from a variety of surveys, government records of estate taxes, and social registries from 1962-2000. These data will be used to isolate and examine aggregate and family-level processes that create wealth mobility. Ultimately, the investigator hopes to show the inadequacy of these data sets and to collect a nationally-representative sample survey to allow estimation of longitudinal patterns of wealth ownership and mobility.
- Robin Moreman, Northern Illinois University, $4,036 for Women's Friendships and Health. FAD funding will support the second of a three-phase effort to determine how women of different ages, races, and sexual preferences perceive the positive and negative aspects of friendship and its relationship to their health. Prior research studies show the differences between elderly men and women's emotional support networks and the importance of these networks for health and well being. These prior studies provide a static view of support networks and focus on friendships in old age. In contrast, Moreman's study will examine the nature and quality of friendships and their perceived impact on respondent's health over the life course. The first phase includes women age 55 and over, the second phase includes women who are 35-54, and the final phase includes women who are under age 35. Respondents to in-depth interviews will be solicited through newsletters and community bulletins initially, and then through purposive snowball sampling. The result of this project should be useful to policymakers, especially as the population ages and becomes more female.

- Joan Spade, Lehigh University, $5,000 for The Changing Role of Trustees in the Governance of Higher Education. This study investigates how the composition and the structure of university boards of trustees have changed over time, and what have been the effects of these changes. Since the 1960s there has been an increase in board size, some race and gender shifts in the composition of trustees, changes in their relationship to universities, and an increase in the number of board committees. Research on these changes and their effects is largely absent. The Principal Investigator will conduct a comparative study of four universities, two of which are Research I and two of which are Research II universities. Existing records will be used to create a database of trustees from 1960 to the present which will be filled out with interviews and archival data. These data will be analyzed by employing a combination of interviews and archival data and theories from the sociology of education, organizations, and stratification. The results of this project will be several journal-length manuscripts on such topics as changing board structure over time, changing patterns of decision making, and trustees definitions and perceptions of their roles. □

Law & Society Newsletter), and as an editorial board member of Marriage and Family Review. Their editorial teamwork at Social Problems (1993-96) was a successful collaborative venture which encouraged them to seek the CS assignment.

Chance and choice conspired to bring Bob and JoAnn to sociology and to Purdue by unconventional routes. And while they have different specialized interests, they share a common vision of sociology as a vehicle for both understanding and changing the social world. A high school dropout fresh out of the Marine Corps but supported by the G.I. Bill, Bob claims to have come to sociology as much by accident as by design. At SUNY Cortland he encountered Ephraim ("Hal") Mizruchi and later at Purdue he crossed paths with Louis Schneider. Bob considers these remarkable mentors to have been extremely influential in shaping his academic interests and career. His reading of Morris R. Cohen's A Dreamer's Journey attracted him to a life of ideas, but he says, "ideas alone were not enough." His affinity for combining scholarship with action was natural given his belief that "political activism is an important spark for continued intellectual growth." From the 1960s (PhD, Purdue, 1962) to the present, Bob has often linked his research with activism on behalf of progressive social change. A veteran of the civil rights and anti-war movements, in the 1980s he worked for peace and social justice in Central America and the middle east. More recently he has focused on plant closings, class polarization, and policies promoting greater economic, political, and social equity. In short, today, as in the past, Bob says, "I have always viewed sociology as a liberating discipline."

JoAnn came to sociology via a night school college program. Her concerns with social inequalities were sharpened and refined by a memorable cast of mentors. Eleanor Vander Haegen at Keene State (NH) was followed by Satoshi Ito at William and Mary as influential guides to the field. At the University of Massachusetts (PhD, 1984), Peter and Alice Rossi left a lasting impression as "passionate researchers who never stopped looking for new ways to understand social phenomena." Since joining Purdue (1984), Carolyn and Bob Perrucci and Dean Knudsen have been among her most supportive colleagues. JoAnn's record as a researcher and as a consultant often overlaps with her concerns with inequities in the legal and criminal justice system. In 1991 she served as Visiting Scholar with the Indonesia Second University Development Project in Jakarta. She found her work there on criminal justice policy and evaluation research to be very rewarding despite censorship by the military government. Of that experience she says, "Like Peter Rossi taught me, when it seems futile, you must only work harder." Indeed, few people in or out of sociology have worked harder than JoAnn as a fair-minded researcher or as a passionate advocate for progressive policy reforms to empower those on the margins of the mainstream social order.

Bob and JoAnn are a real life editorial "Dream Team." They bring to CS the energy, vision, and experience essential to the editorial tasks they will face, and it is clear they are excited by the road ahead. Their goal is to facilitate the emergence of a new body of scholarly literature that will enrich sociology and keep the field vibrant, relevant, interesting and engaged in important scholarly and public issues in the new century. If an Honor Roll of Editors is ever compiled, Bob and JoAnn will stand at the top, and the wisdom of the ASA Council in selecting these stewards to monitor and enliven the sociological pulse will be apparent. □

Teaching and Research on Disabilities Only for Individuals with Disabilities?

by Rosalyn Benjamin Darling
Indiana University of Pennsylvania

When I was asked to write an article for Footnotes on research about disability, my first reaction was to decline, because I have not done much research on disability lately. My shift to research in other areas has been prompted, at least in part, by a trend in the disability studies field toward the exclusion of able-bodied researchers. Upon reconsideration, I thought that this trend itself might be an interesting subject for an article and might provoke some thought and discussion among my colleagues in sociology. The discussion that follows is based on my impressions and opinions and is not intended to be a research-based analysis of the subject.

Disability studies is a growing interdisciplinary field that involves sociologists, as well as other academics, primarily in the humanities and social sciences. The field has produced a number of texts and books of readings in the past few years and is represented through the British journal, Disability and Society and the American Disability Studies Quarterly. The Society for Disability Studies meets annually and attracts an international group of scholars and lay persons with an interest in disability-related research.

The founding members of the Society for Disability Studies included a significant number of sociologists (among them, Irving Kenneth Zola), some of whom had disabilities, some of whom had family members with disabilities, and others with no personal connection to the disability community. More recently, the balance in the membership has shifted to include a much larger proportion of individuals with disabilities. This shift is not accidental. As a result of pressures in the field, many able-bodied researchers today no longer feel welcome to study and teach about disabilities.

These pressures are the result of an exclusionary stance by an outspoken number of individuals with disabilities and are part of a "nothing about us without us" philosophy. This philosophy, which has characterized the disability rights movement, "requires people with disabilities to recognize their need to control and take responsibility for their own lives" (Charlton, 1998, p.17) and suggests that people with disabilities must speak for themselves. In many ways, the philosophy echoes similar stances taken by members of the Civil Rights Movement, the Women's Movement, the Gay and Lesbian Movement, and other social movements. People with disabilities are especially sensitive to the fact that their lives have been controlled to a large extent by medical professionals and by a stigmatizing, ablist society. A strong current in the Disability Rights Movement, especially in Great Britain, has also been a Marxist view of individuals with disabilities as the victims of economic oppression. In recent years, almost all of the leaders of the movement have been individuals with disabilities, rather than nondisabled allies.

The view that people with disabilities must speak for themselves has moved from the streets into the academy. Sociologists and other professionals with disabilities have been arguing that all research and teaching about disability must be conducted by scholars who understand the disability experience; that is, those who have disabilities and who identify as disabled. As one recent statement claimed, "disability studies is a subject for disabled people who are, precisely, its subjects, the people who make it; it is our affair" (Branfield, 1999, p.402). The same writer argues that attempts by "non-disabled" people, who research and work in our area, to justify their involvement...are doomed to failure" (Branfield, 1998, p.143). Although some disagreement exists regarding the inclusion of people with invisible or "lesser" disabilities, those who take the most radical stance generally insist that scholars in the field view their disability as their primary identity.

This view is troubling to me as a sociologist, and should be troubling to other sociologists as well. Certainly, no researchers can completely understand the experience of groups of which they are not a part. However, carried to an extreme, the argument about own studying own seems to negate a basic premise of sociological research. Weber's conception of Verstehen included a requirement that the sociologist "be able to put [him/herself] imaginatively in the place of the actor and thus sympathetically to participate in his experiences" (Weber, 1947, p.90). Some of the best work in sociology over the years has been done by researchers studying "the other." We know a great deal more about women on welfare, men on street corners, homeless people, juvenile delinquents, and various other groups in society as a result of studies by researchers who were not members of those groups. Indeed, many have suggested that outsiders can be more objective than those who have a stake in the findings of a study.

On the other hand, sociology can be exploitative. Commonly, sociological research has involved groups with little power in society. Even with informed consent, we cannot be sure that these groups have really wanted to be studied. Moreover, studies by members of more powerful groups may serve to heighten rather than decrease their subjects' oppression. For these and other reasons, white scholars have generally avoided research on African Americans, and men have avoided research on women. However, research on oppressed groups, including people with disabilities, is important and often receives less attention than it deserves. One might argue that sociologists should only study oppressed groups until those groups become empowered enough to study themselves.

Another alternative is participatory research, in which researchers and their subjects work together in a partnership relationship. In participatory research, members of the group being studied cooperate in establishing the outcomes of the study and may be actively involved in observation, interviewing, or questionnaire administration. In this model, professional sociologists serve as consultants who share their expertise in study design and data analysis in order to help their subjects achieve desired goals. A similar, collaborative relationship might be used in the classroom to "team teach" a course.

I have been teaching a course entitled, Disability and Society, for about ten years. In it, I have tried to incorporate books and articles by individuals with disabilities. I have also had guest speakers with disabilities and have required students to interview people with disabilities. Many of my students with disabilities have also voluntarily shared their experiences with the rest of the class. To the best of my knowledge, the sociology departments in which I have taught have not had any members with disabilities, nor have other members of these departments had the interest or expertise to teach a course in this area. I believe that, if I did not teach this course, students at my university would not have the opportunity to understand disability in a sociological sense, as a devalued status in society. Yet, at a recent meeting of the Society for Disability Studies, a scholar with a disability told me that I should not be teaching the course and that my interview requirement was exploitative.

I suppose I could just teach courses on white, middle-aged, middle-class women, but the demand in that area has not been very great lately. Students major in sociology because they want to learn about the entire spectrum of social life. We would be doing them a disservice if we only taught them about ourselves—regardless of the diversity present in our departments. Although we should make every effort to incorporate the points of view of our subjects in our work, and to work collaboratively with them at every opportunity, we should not be intimidated by them. We owe our students and our discipline a broader and more inclusive view.

Back by Popular Demand

by Amy Hartlaub, Executive Assistant

To the pleasure of sociologists everywhere, two classics in the field have recently been reissued. When they were first published, both Glen Elder's Children of the Great Depression and Charles Perrow's Normal Accidents: Living With High-Risk Technologies, were met with both critical and popular acclaim. Now, with additional text by the authors, both books are once again proving that they still have a profound influence in the scholarly community.

Initially published in 1984, Normal Accidents: Living With High-Risk Technologies changed the way sociologists viewed technology, safety, and disasters, and the way society should deal with such phenomena. The author, Charles Perrow, an organizational theorist at Yale University, forced his readers to reconsider the traditional analysis, and instead consider the idea that catastrophic failures are rarely caused by a single, preventive factor. Due to what Perrow calls "interactive complexity," complex systems cannot necessarily be made "safe," because we cannot anticipate "the unique, the unexpected, and therefore the incomprehensible." Some disasters, simply put, are "normal" accidents beyond our control.

As risky systems continue to proliferate, and as society becomes ever more wary in turn, Perrow believes that the new edition of Normal Accidents will provide a different paradigm in which to study and try to understand the modern technological problems in our world today. In addition, the author hopes that his book will encourage system analysis in the field of sociology and remind the public that sociology is relevant and does address social problems in a distinct and unique way.

Another classic, recently reissued by Westview Press, is Children of the Great Depression. Written by Glen Elder, a sociology professor at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, the book was initially published in 1974 and had a profound impact on the fields of sociology, social psychology, human development, and social history. Published at the early stage of what the author now recognizes to be the rapidly emerging field now described as life course studies, the book paved the way for how people thought about the life course in a rapidly changing world. Issues such as lifelong development and aging were just beginning to grow as a major field within the social and behavioral sciences. Elder's book in many ways contributed to this growth.

Elder hopes the new edition of Children of the Great Depression will reach additional generations of colleagues, students, and general readers. Interestingly, the author admits that his book seems more widely read and popular now than during the first few years after its initial publication. Elder credits this to the fact that, like David Reisman's The Lonely Crowd, issues reflected on in the book are not dated and are ones that still effect us today. Socio-economic changes continue to be world-wide problems and the book's approach to the study of such phenomena, according to its author, is the main reason why it remains relevant. □

New Editor for Journal of Health and Social Behavior

Michael Hughes, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, has been appointed editor-elect of the Journal of Health and Social Behavior by ASA Council.

Although Bruce Link, Columbia University, was previously announced as the new editor of JHSB, he was not able to serve to other recent professional appointments. Departments Undertake Projects to Prepare Future Faculty

by Carla B. Howery, Director
Academic and Professional Affairs Program

The American Sociological Association is pleased to announce that four graduate programs, working with a cluster of undergraduate institutions, have been funded for innovative projects to prepare future faculty (PFF) in sociology. The project, funded by an anonymous donor, and arranged through the American Association of Colleges and Universities and the Council of Graduate Schools, works with six disciplinary associations, including ASA. Each doctoral-granting institution forms a partnership with primarily undergraduate institutions, and proposes ways in which PhD students can learn about the full range of faculty roles and responsibilities in those two and four-year college settings. (See February 2000 Footnotes page 4 for a complete description of the project.)

The Advisory Panel¹ reviewed a robust pool of applicants and selected four departments: North Carolina State University; Indiana University; Texas A & M University; and University of Nebraska-Lincoln.

The North Carolina State University proposal builds on the department's strength in mentoring students. Project leader Barbara J. Risman highlighted three goals: "initiating innovative ways of training graduate students to teach; initiating innovative ways of training graduate students to do research in cooperative team settings; and initiative creating ways to mentor minority students that will increase recruitment and retention of under-represented populations into the academy." NCSU's partner institutions include: College of Charleston, Elon College, North Carolina Center University, University of North Carolina-Greensboro, and University of North Carolina-Wilmington. In particular, this proposal offers an experimental model of integrated mentoring. Rather than having an individual mentor/advisor, and having that relationship center primarily on research, the NCSU proposal groups several faculty and students across multiple experiences (e.g., teaching, service) and multiple institutional types. Students who are selected to join the PFF project will be matched for one year with a teaching mentor at a partner institution.

Indiana University has been involved in national PFF programs for many years. Like many doctoral-granting campuses, there are few undergraduate institutions in close proximity, making it difficult to have local placements for graduate students. Project leader Bernice Pescosolido laid out four goals for the Indiana University initiative: "(1) to improve the training of PhD students by exposure to a wide variety of issues and environments facing the sociology professorate; (2) to being a broad-based conversation on issues relevant to teaching and learning in sociology; (3) to develop a set of mentoring principles and procedures; and (4) to continue to erase the bifurcation between teaching and research by exploring the potential of sociology to contribute simultaneously to the scholarship of teaching and learning." Indiana University will work with partner institutions including DePauw University, Butler University, and Marian College, as well as institutions in the IU system. One aspect of PFF at IU involves five student-faculty pairs shadowing colleagues in the partner schools.

At Texas A & M, the partner institutions include Blinn College, Our Lady of the Lake University, Prairie View A & M University, San Houston State University, Texas A & M International University, Texas Southern University, and University of Texas at Pan

American. This broad range of institutions brings within the broad geographic dispersion, which is part of the Texas mystique. PFF graduate students will visit the partner schools and those faculty will come to A & M for collaborative workshops on teaching. In this proposal, A & M builds on its work as an ASA MOST school and its training grants from NSF, all of which have resulted in an entering cohort of graduate students about half majority and half underrepresented minority students. "Many of the minority students have come from the undergraduate institutions in the PFF cluster," says Harland Prechel, project director. "Extending our collaboration from the recruitment of graduate students through their placement as new faculty seems like a useful service for our students and for the profession."

University of Nebraska-Lincoln is another campus with longstanding commitments to PFF activities and to addressing the scarcity of racial and ethnic minorities in the nearby region. The department boldly proposed to address the preparation of doctoral students for faculty careers at Historically Black Colleges and Universities, Hispanic Serving Institutions, Tribal Colleges, and at University Medical Centers. The partner schools include Alcorn State University, Grambling State University, New Mexico Highland University, Texas A & M University-Corpus Christi, Little Priest Tribal College and the University of Nebraska Medical Center. PFF students will make 1-2 week visits to at least two of these institutions. "Throughout the year, students and mentors will remain in contact through video-conferencing and an electronic teaching roundtable," says project director Helen Moore. Moore currently edits the ASA journal Teaching Sociology.

Representatives from the four sociology teams will meet with similar teams from the other five disciplines (psychology, political science, communications, teachers of English, and history) at the PFF conference in Colorado Springs at the end of June. The ASA Annual Meeting features a workshop on PFF programs, and then an open forum for "friends of PFF" to engage more of the sociological community in this important work.

¹The ASA Advisory Panel will work with the project for all three years, and representatives will attend the Colorado Conference, the ASA Annual Meeting, and regional meetings. The Advisory Panel includes: Carla B. Howery, American Sociological Association; Suzanne Ortega, University of Nebraska; Marcia Texler Segal, Indiana University-Southeast; Judith Howard, University of Washington; William Roy, University of California-Los Angeles; Jean Shin, Western Maryland College; Ted Long, Elizabethtown College; Nancy Sacks, SUNY-Stony Brook. □

College Works to Ease Racial Tension on Campus

by Kim Cameron-Dominguez, Minority Affairs
Program Assistant

In 1998, several incidents sparked racial tensions on the campus of Franklin Pierce College. One of the College's many efforts to address these issues has been spearheaded by Dr. Douglass Challenger, an Associate Professor of Sociology and Project Director for New England Center for Civic Life at Franklin Pierce College, a small, predominantly white college in Rindge, NH. Challenger, who had been experimenting with a model of deliberative dialogue developed by the National Issues

Forum (NIF) and the Kettering Foundation, realized the recent tensions on campus provided an immediate opportunity to which the model could be applied.

The NIF model of deliberative dialogue involves framing issues through open discussion and the integration of multiple perspectives and experiences. Deliberative dialogue allow participants to explore their similarities as well as their differences and to use these discoveries as a method for finding not one, but several approaches toward a solution to the issue at hand. Challenger and his students set out to use this method as way of approaching the College's desire to address issues of diversity. During brainstorming sessions, minority and white students were encouraged to speak frankly about their experiences with race and acceptance on campus. It became clear that each group brought distinctly different perspectives to the discussion. The brainstorming sessions resulted in the students identifying three or four overriding themes upon which to focus, developing discussion guidebooks on race, and training as moderators for the public deliberative forums that were to be the culmination of the entire effort.

In April 1999, four forums were held on campus addressing the question "How Can We Improve Race and Ethnic Relations on Campus." Through these forums, Challenger and his students were able to create a venue by which students, faculty, and staff could come together and engage in systematic dialogue that examined the issues surrounding the racial tension, and work cooperatively toward options for dealing with it.

Though the campus community was not required to attend, the forums were well attended by about 120 members of the Franklin Pierce College community. Encouragingly, many people opted to participate in all four forums.

Dr. Challenger is committed to seeing that the efforts to address diversity on campus do not stop with the

"One of the biggest obstacles to progress in race relations today is white people's denial of the continuing need for significant changes and the existence of biased policies and procedures. Students' comments . . . reveal that this new way of teaching about these issues succeeded in breaking through that denial . . . They began to discover that their mistaken notions about the commonalities of experiences were a major obstacle to developing productive relations across racial lines. This framework for the course raised this awareness like no other technique I have used." Douglass Challenger, Diversity (Winter 2000, page 10).

National Conference on Re-Envisioning the PhD

Multiple stakeholders in doctoral education came together for an intensive weekend of work on re-envisioning the PhD degree. Funded by the Pew Charitable Trusts and organized by faculty at the University of Washington, the invitational meeting brought 150 people to Seattle over the weekend of April 13-15.

The conference organizers identified nine sectors that shape graduate education:

Graduate deans and faculty; Non-graduate institutions ("consumers of PhDs"); doctoral students themselves; representatives from the K-12 community; business and industry leaders; government agencies (e.g., NSF); foundations; representatives from higher education associations and from disciplinary associations. Carla Howery, ASA Director of Academic and Professional Affairs, and Judith Howard, University of Washington, were invited to represent the ASA.

ASA was asked to be a part of the showcase on promising practices to display materials from the Teaching Resources Center, the accomplishments of the MOST Program, the Departmental Resources

Group consultants, and the preparing future faculty project (see article on this page). One important session shared data from several national surveys of doctoral students. The results showed a declining interest in academic careers, considerable dissatisfaction with their doctoral programs, and a desire to take more courses in other departments. The latter trend was applauded by the industry representatives who stressed the value of teamwork and communication across disciplines.

Lee Shulman, President of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, spoke about departments' willingness to experiment with doctoral education and with new tracks within MA-level training. He announced that the Foundation plans to begin a multi-year study of some of these alternatives. The proceedings of the conference are summarized at the website <http://depts.washington.edu/envision/indx.html>, and covered in a story in The Chronicle of Higher Education April 28, 2000. □

Scholarship and Departmental Rankings Revisited

In his presidential address to the American Sociological Association, Alejandro Portes (American Sociological Review, February 2000) eloquently shows how purposive social action toward identifiable ends guided sociological theory throughout the first fifty years of the discipline. Portes contends that in the ensuing years, sociological theory and empirical analyses have reflected a tradition of intellectual skepticism that undermines system-builders and social engineers whose work rests on assumptions of purposive action. At one level, such as when we don our sociology "hats", Portes's argument is not too surprising; indeed we are taught to look for the unexpected and challenge myths built on predictable steps. Yet when we exchange our sociology hats for others, say in administration, the irony is that many sociologists revert to the very linear models of purposive action that they would openly challenge in different contexts. Take, for example, Barry Markovsky's analysis of departmental scholarship and rankings, which he presented in Footnotes (February 2000).

Markovsky offers evidence that the University of Iowa's Sociology Department, at least during the past three years, has bested many other fine departments in their level of scholarly productivity. He examines several different measures of productivity, to include total counts in prominent journals and faculty ratios, comparing these to rankings published by the USNWR periodical. Underlying much of his commentary is the implicit assumption that rankings of doctoral granting departments are a function of scholarly productivity. Indeed his modus operandi is the implicit belief that purposive action, in the form of quality scholarship, is reflected in departments' subsequent rankings, as a measure of their intended outcomes. In sum, departments need only improve their scholarship to improve their relative standing in the field.

When one looks closely at the logic of this argument, important gaps become readily apparent between the theory and evidence. For example, my own analyses of sociology departments (Social Forces, June 1998) offers strong evidence that scholarship is far less important in determining ratings, or their respective rankings, than their past reputations. Patently, quality scholarship, as measured by both books and articles, is not a straightforward means of securing or improving departmental reputation. Instead, earlier ratings are found to be the critical property bearing on how departments are evaluated. Moreover, when examined across disciplines, I show that the reputations of departments and their affiliated universities, not scholarship, are the critical factors in determining subsequent departmental reputation (American Educational Research Journal, Fall 1999).

While the sociology department at the University of Iowa may have taken steps in the last few years to improve its level of scholarly output, these efforts, although laudable, are not likely to significantly improve its corresponding status. To illustrate, looking at data drawn from my Social Forces (SF) article for the time interval 1970-89, reveals a slightly different pattern than the one Markovsky presents (see Table 1). Iowa ranks 25th, not 10th, when the total article count is based on 20 years of publications instead of just three and includes articles from the ASR, AJS, and SF, as well as Social Problems, Demography, Sociology of Education, and Social Quar- terly. Longer time intervals are important because the number of departmental publications is found to vary dramatically during any two-three year interval. Hence, publication patterns are somewhat unstable, especially for intervals based on a short duration. Moreover, when the total 20 year count is divided by the number of full-time faculty (not to include part-time and adjuncts as Markovsky does), Iowa ranks 20th instead of first. Similarly, when counting book publications, based on a standard benchmark of those reviewed in Contemporary Sociology, Iowa ranks 24th in total counts and 23rd in its corresponding faculty ratio.

In turning attention to rankings based on departmental ratings from three comparable national studies (the 1994 National Research Council report, the 1982 Conference Board report, and the 1970 Roose and Anderson report that was sponsored by the American Council on Education), Iowa again does not fare as well as that reported by Markovsky. Indeed, the department is ranked as 38th, 48th, and 29th in the 1994, 1982, and 1970 reports. A point is in order on the distinction between rankings and ratings. These reports published ratings, not rankings, based on the mean scores of the responses provided by a sample of sociology faculty. The rankings force an arbitrary hierarchy that is not apparent in the ratings. Indeed, many of the ratings vary only marginally and do not differ significantly from one another. Correlations between the ratings of the three studies reveal a high degree of stability (ranging between $r=.87$ for 1970-94 and $r=.92$ for 1982-94). Correlations between the ratings and scholarship levels are slightly less pronounced ($r=.77$ for 1994 rating and articles published in 1980s; $r=.76$ for 1994 rating and books published in 1980s). When controlling for the ratings departments' received at an earlier time interval, scholarship contributes little to an explanation of the current rating.

Why? Returning to Portes' argument, the manifest goals (e.g., improved ratings) often go unrecognized at the end of a planned process (e.g., improved quality scholarship). To understand this, we might look at ratings as a form of status within an institutional environment. Specifically, John W. Meyer and associates have shown that the status conferred to institutional structures, such as education,

2000 Annual Meeting: Preliminary Program

95th Annual Meeting
August 12-16, 2000
Hilton Washington
Marriott Wardman Park
Washington, DC

Oppression, Domination, and Liberation: Challenges for the 21st Century

Welcome to the 95th Annual Meeting!

The 95th Annual Meeting of the American Sociological Association (ASA) is a special event this year! Located in the nation's capital, the 2000 meeting has been in production for two years in order to meet the scholarly, teaching, training, and practice needs of sociologists and aligned social scientists at every career stage. Please come and listen, discuss, contribute, and participate—in paper sessions, workshops, plenary events, and town meetings organized around the important substantive areas and issues that animate sociology as a field.

If this is the first time you have attended an ASA Annual Meeting, please plan to attend an orientation session at 3:00 p.m. on Saturday, August 12, prior to the Opening Plenary Session. Advice from ASA Officers and experienced attendees will help you chart a course through the myriad activities and substantive attractions.

Newcomers and experienced participants alike are invited to the Welcoming Party on Saturday evening, immediately following the Opening Plenary Session. Do check the "Other Events" section for more special features to include on your convention calendar. Plan now to join with sociologists and other social science colleagues who are meeting in DC this summer!

Annual Meeting Schedule

The official days of the 2000 ASA Annual Meeting are Saturday to Wednesday, August 12-16, 2000. Program sessions are scheduled on all five days. There are also pre-meeting activities scheduled on Friday, August 11; see the Program Summary for listings.

Most program sessions are 1 hour and 40 minutes in length, followed by a 20-minute break. Exceptions are clearly noted in the detailed program schedule. The turnover schedule is as follows:

8:30 a.m.-10:10 a.m.
10:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.
12:30 p.m.-2:10 p.m.
2:30 p.m.-4:10 p.m.
4:30 p.m.-6:10 p.m.
6:30 p.m.-8:10 p.m.
8:30 p.m.-10:15 p.m.

The 6:30-8:10 p.m. time slot is normally allocated for Section receptions and member-sponsored activities and meetings of other groups. All sessions end by 4:10 p.m. on the fifth day.

Please refer to the Program Summary for a daily listing of all sessions, meetings, and social events.

Plenaries on Sexism and Racism

The Annual Meeting theme of "Oppression, Domination, and Liberation: Challenges for the 21st Century" is being addressed in the featured plenaries. Details on these important sessions are shown below. Make sure that your meeting schedule includes these major sessions!

Sexism and Feminism: Challenges for the 21st Century Hilton Washington Saturday, August 12, 4:30-6:10 p.m.

Organizer: Joe R. Feagin, University of Florida
Forever Chasing Rainbows: Struggling to End Gender as We Know It. Judith Stacey, University of Southern California
Black Feminism and Social Justice. Patricia Hill Collins, University of Cincinnati
Gender Oppression and Gender Democracy in Global Market Society. R. W. Connell, University of Sydney, Australia
Gender Vertigo: Toward a Post-Gender Society. Barbara Risman, North Carolina State University

Racism and Anti-Racism Struggles: Global Perspectives Marriott Wardman Park

Session 288, Monday, August 14, 12:30-2:10 p.m.
Organizers: Florence B. Bonner, Howard University; and Joe R. Feagin, University of Florida

Presiders: Joe R. Feagin, University of Florida; and James E. Blackwell, University of Massachusetts (emeritus)
Panel: Walter R. Allen, University of California, Los Angeles; Debra Robinson, World Council of Churches; additional panelists to be announced

Awards Ceremony & Presidential Address

The Presidential Plenary featuring the formal address of ASA President Joe R. Feagin will be held on Sunday, August 13, at 4:30 p.m. The ASA Awards Ceremony, conferring the 2000 awards, will open this plenary session. All registrants are invited to this plenary session and to a special reception afterwards to honor President Feagin and the award recipients.

ASA Business Meeting and Open Forum

The ASA Business Meeting is an opportunity for members of the Association to discuss important issues facing the discipline and profession. Members are encouraged to attend this "town business meeting" convened by ASA officers and Council.

The Business Meeting is usually comprised of three parts:

1. Summary reports on the Association and on key activities this year by President Feagin, Secretary Bonner, and Executive Officer Levine.
2. Discussion of ASA committee restructuring and possible other topics under consideration by Council. The specific topics will be posted in the July/August issue of ASA Footnotes, on the ASA homepage (<http://www.asanet.org>), and in the Final Program for the Annual Meeting.
3. Presentation and discussion about issues and topics that the membership believes are important for consideration by ASA Council, committees, task forces, or the Executive Office. If members seek to advance a formal resolution, presentation and discussion of such resolutions need to be accompanied by background materials on the issue and must be submitted in advance to the Executive Office. Contact Executive Office governance staff for guidelines (202-383-9005, x327; governance@asanet.org). The deadline for submission of resolutions and background materials is July 15, 2000.

The meeting concludes with the transition of duties from President Feagin to incoming President Massey.

All meeting attendees are invited to join ASA officers, Council members, and staff for continental breakfast and discussion at the ASA Business Meeting on Tuesday, August 15, 7:00-8:15 a.m.

Thematic Sessions

Thematic Sessions are devoted to investigating the meeting theme, "Oppression, Domination, and Liberation: Challenges for the 21st Century." Topics introduced in the 22 Thematic Sessions will be developed throughout the Annual Meeting Program in workshops, seminars, discussions, poster presentations, and paper sessions.

Session 280, Monday, August 14, 10:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.

Special Sessions

Special Sessions feature invited paper presenters or panelists on topics that further investigate the meeting theme or focus attention on other timely and important issues. Many special sessions were proposed to the Program Committee by members of the Association. Please refer to the Program Schedule for topics and other details on the 103 Special Sessions on this year's program roster.

Open Refereed Roundtables

The 2000 Program Committee has continued this open roundtable component which was added to the general program four years ago. Che-fu Lee (Catholic University) was invited to review submissions and organize roundtable sessions using a "mini-session" format: a general topic identified for each table, two to five paper presentations, and a table presider to coordinate presentations and discussion. Five general roundtable sessions were created on a variety of themes; for details, see sessions 88, 209, 238, 304, and 484.

Poster Sessions

This program component features a series of display presentations that allow face-to-face conversation between authors and viewers. By facilitating informal discussions between presenters and "browsers," Poster Sessions provide a more direct forum for information exchange than do formal paper presentations. There are two categories of poster displays on this year's program—research paper presentations and informational presentations.

The 2000 Program Committee invited Amy Schindler (Columbia University) to review general submissions and select research poster presentations. Two sessions were arranged from the open submissions. In addition, the Program Committee reserved space for a special research poster session on inequalities, another one featuring research by new PhDs, plus a special interest poster session on modes of visual research and analysis.

Informational poster presentations provide information on resources, materials, and opportunities. The Research Support Forum includes two major poster sessions to highlight research funding opportunities and data resources. As part of the Graduate Education focus, a poster session is scheduled featuring displays and representatives from participating graduate departments of sociology.

The varied roster of display presentations includes something of interest for every meeting attendee. Be sure to include some time in your schedule to visit this year's poster displays, adjacent to the ASA Exhibits.

Regular Sessions

Regular Sessions are comprised of research papers submitted in response to the 2000 Call for Papers. The Program Committee appointed organizers for 108 general Regular Session topics and announced that topics were open to submissions from ASA members. Each Regular Session organizer received anywhere from 3 to 69 submissions for review. A total of 178 formal paper sessions were organized from the submitted papers. Please refer to the Program Schedule for details on each Regular Session.

Informal Discussion Roundtables

This popular program component is designed to bring together small groups of people interested in discussing specific topics. The Program Committee invited Stella M. Capek (Hendricks College) to review proposals and coordinate topics and discussion leaders. Four informal discussion sessions have been organized to enhance networking opportunities.

In addition, ASA Executive Officer sponsored for a special topical roundtable session on "New Directions in Sociology" as an opportunity to create a forum for exploring fresh opportunities and new paths in core issues and on nascent issues. Topics and presenters on this special roundtable will appear in the Final Program.

Since all roundtable discussions are held simultaneously in one large meeting room, no audio-visual equipment or recording devices may be used.

Ninth Annual Research Support Forum

ASA is pleased to announce the ninth annual Research Support Forum featuring research funding information and discussion of science policy issues on Saturday through Tuesday, August 12-15. The Forum begins Saturday afternoon with a publishing workshop, continues the next day with two sessions key to obtaining and developing sources of support for social science research, turns to data resources and census issues on Monday, and concludes on Tuesday morning with a hands-on workshop on developing grant proposals.

The first workshop, "Publishing for a Scientific Audience of 140,000: How to Get an Article into Science," provides insights on presenting sociological research to a broader audience. Planned as a professional workshop, this session aims to offer advice and information for new and experienced authors.

On Saturday morning, the next workshop focuses on what you should know about navigating Federal support for sociological research. Chaired by experienced grant recipient Havidan Rodriguez (University of Puerto Rico, Mayaguez), the workshop panel features insider views from Christine Bachrach (National Institutes of Health), Sally T. Hillsman (U.S. Department of Justice), and Murray Webster, Jr., National Science Foundation.

The third event is a special "town meeting" with Norman Bradburn, the new Assistant Director for the Social, Behavioral, and Economic Sciences at the National Science Foundation. This session provides an accessible forum to learn and ask questions about current opportunities, new initiatives, and the complexities of advancing social science at NSF. The panel of experienced researchers will ask candid questions and contribute to making this event a truly open forum for Dr. Bradburn and attendees. Bradburn, a social psychologist and former Provost at the University of Chicago, is looking forward to having such open meetings with the social science community. With a potential major initiative to be launched in fiscal year 2003, your participation is encouraged. Please attend and bring questions.

A key part of this Research Support Forum is a three-hour poster session on "Opportunities for Research Support," scheduled for Saturday afternoon. This exhibit session includes public and private funding representatives who are available to talk individually with meeting attendees about funding priorities, application procedures, and other specific issues of concern. It is an important opportunity to obtain face-to-face advice and information. The Final Program will contain a complete listing with program descriptions.

The Research Support Forum continues on Monday morning with a second three-hour poster session on "Data Resources." This session provides meeting participants with an opportunity to meet principal investigators, researchers, and managers of large-scale data sets that are publicly available for use. Each exhibit showcases at least one major data set of significance for primary or secondary analysis. This event is an excellent way of learning about available data and their potential for a range of research and teaching uses. The Final Program will contain a complete listing with program descriptions.

A major highlight of this year's Forum is the Thematic Session on "Census 2000: Taking Stock and Moving Forward." This Census session should be high on the list of attendees interested in a frank "stock taking" regarding the Census and where we are. Dr. Kenneth Prewitt, Director of the Bureau, heads an open panel forum on current issues for the Census. Whether as data user or concerned citizen, please attend with your questions about response rates, multi-racial classification, undercounts, and data availability. This session is a timely opportunity for frank and lively exchange.

The Forum concludes on Tuesday morning with a professional workshop led by Patrica E. White (National Science Foundation) and a panel of experienced researchers that offers expert advice to beginners and novices on how to write a successful grant proposal.

The Research Support Forum is designed to provide invaluable help, access, and consideration of important substantive and policy issues for new researchers and more experienced scholars. From the opening workshop on Saturday afternoon to the closing session on Tuesday, attendees can count on plentiful access to a variety of funding experts and data sources during the 2000 Forum.

Didactic Seminars

Didactic Seminars are designed to keep sociologists abreast of recent scholarly trends and developments. Experts considered to be at the forefront of a given field are invited by the Program Committee to conduct these sessions.

Seminar speakers will present materials to explain specialized developments within their topic areas. Seminars are scheduled for two to four hours, except for the pre-meeting course co-sponsored by the Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research and the ASA Section on Methodology. Please see the listing below for session details and brief descriptions provided by the leaders.

Attendance at each Didactic Seminar varies somewhat, depending on location and/or leader preference. Attendance limits and fees are noted below, and prepaid registration is required. All persons registering for seminars must also be paid registrants for the Annual Meeting. Indicate your choice(s) on the Seminar Reservation portion of the registration form and return it with your fee payment and Annual Meeting registration.

Reservations for all seminars are accepted in order of receipt in the ASA Executive Office. Confirmations will be mailed prior to the Annual Meeting. Admission tickets may be picked up with name badges and program packets at the ASA Preregistration desk in the Marriott Wardman Park.

Cancellation. If written cancellation is received before July 1, 90% of the seminar fee will be refunded. Fees are non-refundable after July 1, 2000. However, if the required enrollment is not reached by the time preregistration closes and a seminar is cancelled, all fees will be fully refunded.

Social Network Analysis (co-sponsored by the Inter-University Consortium for Political and Social Research and the ASA Section on Methodology)—Hilton Washington

Session 1, Thursday, August 5, 9:00 a.m.-12:00 noon, 1:00-4:00 p.m.
Fee: $125 general, $100 Methodology Section member, $60 student

Attendance Limit: 50
Stanley Wasserman, University of Illinois, Urbana-Champaign;
Katherine Faust, University of South Carolina

This seminar will present an introduction to concepts, methods, and applications of social network analysis in the social and behavioral sciences. Social network analysis focuses on relationships between social entities and is widely used in the social and behavioral sciences as well as in economics, marketing, organizational behavior, and industrial engineering. This focus on relationships requires a special set of methods distinct from the usual statistics and data analysis techniques used to analyze the standard "cases by variables" data.

We will begin with the basic concepts and principles of social network analysis, including the elements of the social network paradigm and formal representations for social networks (graph theory and matrices). We will then discuss structural and locational properties of actors in social networks: centrality, prestige, and prominence; cohesive subgroups and cliques; equivalence of actors, including structural equivalence and block models; an introduction to local analysis including dyadic and triadic analyses; and basic distribution theory and statistical models.

The course text will be Social Network Analysis: Methods and Applications (Cambridge, ENG and New York: Cambridge University Press, 1994) by Stanley Wasserman and Katherine Faust. We will focus on chapters 3, 4, 5, 7, 9, 10, 13, and 15 from this book. We recommend that seminar attendees obtain this book in advance and read the first few chapters prior to the session.

So You Want to Do Applied Policy Research?—Howard University

Session 2, Friday, August 11, 1:00-6:00 p.m.
Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 15

Leaders: Roberta Spalter-Roth, American Sociological Association; and Beatrice Edwards, Public Services International

This seminar is designed for those thinking of careers as applied policy researchers (including advocacy research) and those teaching courses in this area. In this overview, we introduce the following topic areas: approaches to applied policy research from "purple prose" to cost-benefit analysis; gaining credibility for different types of research; frequently used procedures and techniques, including types of research used at different stages of the policy process; developing quantitative and qualitative evidence (the "number" and the "victim"); policy analysis and writing; and the ethics of applied research. Two hands-on activities will illustrate the evidence gathering, the analysis, and the writing aspects of policy research. First, participants will work in groups to choose a policy issue (including standardized testing, contingent work, welfare reform, or privatization of public services), conduct an internet search for relevant data, and analyze their findings. Second, participants will turn their findings into a piece of policy writing appropriate to a specific policy forum.

Doing Qualitative Analysis with Computer Assisted Software: An Introduction—Hilton Washington

Session 33, Saturday, August 12, 10:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.
Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 50

Leaders: Sharlene Hesse-Biber, Boston College; and Raymond C. Maietta, ResearchTalk, Inc.

This didactic seminar is for qualitative researchers who wish to use computer software to analyze textual data (e.g., case records, newspaper articles, field notes, transcripts of interviews or focus group discussions), pictures, graphics, or audio and video tapes. We will briefly explore the history of computer-assisted software programs in the social sciences. We will analyze the problems and prospects of using computer-assisted software programs for qualitative data analysis. We will discuss the factors you should consider in selecting a software program. This seminar is intended for those who want a basic introduction to the field of computer-assisted software for qualitative data analysis.

New Methods for Handling Missing Data—Hilton Washington

Session 84, Saturday, August 12, 2:30-4:10 p.m.
Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 50

Leader: Paul D. Allison, University of Pennsylvania

This seminar is designed to introduce participants to two major developments in techniques for handling missing data, maximum likelihood and multiple imputation. The seminar begins with a review and critique of conventional methods for handling missing data in statistical analysis, including listwise deletion, pairwise deletion, dummy variable data adjustment and imputation. The concepts of missing at random and missing completely at random are defined and explained. Maximum likelihood methods for missing data at random are defined and explained. Maximum likelihood methods for missing data with linear models and log-linear models are explained, along with examples using the Amos package. The remainder of the seminar is devoted to multiple imputation, a method that can be used for any kind of statistical model, without resorting to specialized software (except for the imputation software). Information is provided on freeware and commercial software. Participants should be familiar with basic principles of statistical inference and have some knowledge of and experience with multiple regression.

An Overview of Structural Equation Models—Hilton Washington

Session 114, Sunday, August 13, 8:30-10:10 a.m.
Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 50

Leader: Kenneth Bollen, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill

The workshop provides an overview of Structural Equation Models (SEMs). Sometimes called "LISREL," this general statistical model includes ANOVA, multiple regression, path analysis, factor analysis, and many other procedures as special cases. A distinguishing feature of the model is that it allows multiple indicators of latent variables (concepts) and it can estimate relationships that take account of measurement error. The seminar will examine the major subtypes of the model and the primary steps in applying it. We will discuss examples of programs and outputs from one or more of the major SEM packages. Participants should have a good background in multiple regression and should be familiar with matrix notation.

Computer-Assisted Software for Qualitative Analysis—Howard University

Session 115, Sunday, August 13, 8:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.
Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 40

Leaders: Sharlene Hesse-Biber, Boston College; Raymond C. Maietta, ResearchTalk, Inc.

This didactic seminar is for qualitative researchers who wish a basic overview of computer software to analyze textual data, pictures, graphics, audio and video tapes. We will describe the range of some of the most important computer software programs available on the market today and will compare and contrast some of the most important program features. We will discuss the factors you should consider in selecting a software program. We will provide a brief demonstration of a range of some of the most important software program for analyzing qualitative data (text, audio tapes and video tapes). We will discuss some of the methodological implications of using computer-assisted software to analyze qualitative data.

Teaching and Research in Cyberspace—Marriott Wardman Park

Session 204, Sunday, August 13, 2:30-4:10 p.m.
Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 50

Leaders: Andrea Baker, Ohio University, Lancaster; Chris Toulouse, Hofstra University; and Jessie Daniels, University of California, Berkeley

This seminar will survey emerging issues in the use of the internet in teaching and research, with presentations from three panelists who have extensive, and varied, experience with internet technology. Sociologists will do more and more research online as people integrate cyberspace into their experience of the everyday world. Rather than an "exotic" or "deviant" form of human behavior, the online world is increasingly a place where people are forming and maintaining vital communities and significant relationships.

Andrea Baker, drawing on her own research of online romances, will raise questions about the advantages and disadvantages of applying traditional methods of interviews, questionnaires and participant/observation to the virtual realm. Chris Toulouse will discuss issues arising from the use of cutting-edge internet-based teaching tools (known as server scripts) which allow instructors to go beyond merely posting course home pages and move toward sculpting participation in coursework. These tools, including forms, weighted quizzes and online forums, can provide new kinds of challenges for instructors and unique learning opportunities for students. Toulouse will address some of the skills required to master these new tools and offer some suggestions for how best to implement them. Jessie Daniels will briefly discuss some of her own experiences with both research and teaching "race relations" online. Daniels will also address a few of the questions emerging around these new horizons, such as, what are some of the theoretical, methodological and ethical implications of doing sociology online; what is in the best interest of faculty for implementing new practices; and what are the competing agendas trying to shape their use. For more information about this seminar, please visit: <http://www.jessiedaniels.org/ASA/seminar>.

Multilevel Analysis—Howard University

Session 232, Monday, August 14, 8:30-11:30 a.m.
Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 40

Leader: Tim Futing Liao, University of Illinois, Urbana

The very nature of nested social phenomena has stimulated interest in and development of multilevel methods in the social sciences. In sociology, contextual analysis developed to deal with the same analytic problem faced by researchers using multilevel methods. The wide availability of software for multilevel modeling has in recent years made multilevel analysis easier. This didactic seminar aims to provide the participant with the ability to (1) understand the basic theory of multilevel modeling, (2) identify circumstances under which multilevel analysis is appropriate, (3) apply multilevel methods using an appropriate software package, and (4) interpret results from multilevel analysis. We will cover the model with a continuous dependent variable and the model with a categorical one. Taught in a computer laboratory, the seminar emphasizes hands-on experience. The free version of a special-purpose program, HLM, will be available for everyone's use. We will also discuss how to use general-purpose software such as SAS for multilevel modeling. The prerequisite for the workshop is a good familiarity with linear models. To learn to apply multilevel modeling with a discrete dependent variable, familiarity with logit models is also necessary.

Participatory Research Methods—Hilton Washington

Session 233, Monday, August 14, 8:30-10:10 a.m.
Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 50

Leader: Randy Stoeker, University of Toledo

This seminar will focus on using the research and education methods variously known as participatory research, action research, participatory action research, community-based research, collaborative research, activist research, and popular education. It is intended for people with little to moderate experience using these methods to collaborate with community-based groups. The seminar will be interactive, drawing on your experiences, questions, and concerns. Thinking about the roles of academics, grass-roots folks, and others, we will discuss how groups can use participatory research to develop a research question, choose research methods, collect data, report results, and organize action. Depending on participants' interests and time available, we will also discuss concerns that academics have about doing participatory research, such as publishing articles, achieving tenure, getting arrested ;-), etc.

Postmodernism and Social Analysis—Marriott Wardman Park

Session 261, Monday, August 14, 10:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.
Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 60

Leader: Charles Lemert, Wesleyan University

The seminar will examine historical and other empirical reasons sociologists might entertain the idea that the world is becoming postmodern. Its premise is that well-known, and poorly understood, theories of the postmodern may not be the best guide to understand the issues. Just the same, the literature associated with postmodern thinking will be discussed comparatively. Special attention will be given to feminist, African-American, postcolonial, and queer theories, as well as the usual cast of characters (e.g., Foucault, Derrida, Baudrillard). Attempts will be made to demonstrate the empirical conditions that have given rise to this kind of thinking. In turn, the theories will be discussed with an eye to their value as indices of empirical trends. The seminar will give special attention to the fate of analytic methods in sociology as they may be enriched or defeated by the demands of a postmodern world. Ample time will be allowed for questions and discussion. Participants should read the following book in advance: Charles Lemert, Postmodernism Is Not What You Think (Blackwell, 1997).

Qualitative Interviewing: Intersubjectivity, Reflexivity, and Painful Moments to Be Endured and Even Shared with Colleagues Afterward—Marriott Wardman Park

Session 298, Monday, August 14, 2:30-4:10 p.m.
Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 75

Leader: Arlene Kaplan Daniels, Northwestern University

Those who are at all open and forthcoming about their interviewing experience admit that these experiences, though rewarding, can be painful and even excoriating. I have written at length about what can be learned from such experiences, both upon the subject of concern and also about one's own character and one's need for improvement in that area. In this seminar we will look at the problems and opportunities created by the ambience developed between the interviewer and the respondent over time. We will discuss the interview—protracted and continued over time—and the venue, the previous expectations and understandings, the nature of the topics to be discussed (whether innocuous or touchy) as well as how the topics work out for discussion in interaction. We will also consider the nature of the interviewers' revelations and willingness to reveal his or her own interests and values. Finally we will consider the relative social skills and powers of the interviewer and the informant for an appreciation of what nuances and unspoken directives may guide the interview situation, irrespective of its ostensible purpose.

Introduction to Computer-Assisted Telephone Interviewing—Howard University

Session 299, Monday, August 14, 2:30-6:10 p.m.
Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 40

Leader: Mary Scheuer Senter, Central Michigan University

This seminar will introduce participants to Computer-Assisted Telephone Interviewing (CATI), using software available from Sawtooth Technologies. The seminar will meet in a computer laboratory so that participants can simulate the stages of designing an interview schedule, loading a sample, establishing study specifications, and monitoring the progress of interviewing. While the seminar leader has experience working with CATI only in a small, university-based research center (with 12 interviewing stations), the software can be used by large facilities as well.

Web-based Resources for Instruction—Howard University

Session 365, Tuesday, August 15, 8:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.
Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 40

Leaders: Nan Chico, California State University, Hayward; Ed Nelson and Elizabeth Nelson, California State University, Fresno; and Jim Ross, California State University, Bakersfield

This seminar will focus on instructional uses of quantitative data sets available on the web. These web sites provide both the data and the statistical software for analysis at no cost. While some faculty may choose to download the data sets and use them with software (e.g., SPSS, SAS, STATA) available on their home computers, other faculty may have their students analyze the data using software available on the web site. The seminar will focus on several different types of data: Census data, the General Social Survey, American National Election data, Field Poll data, and data housed in the topical archives of the Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research. Handouts will include materials that can directly be incorporated into the classroom. Participants will also be introduced to the Social Sciences Teaching Resources Depository, a web site maintained by the Social Sciences Research and Instructional Council of the California State University. (<http://www.csuak.edu/ssric/>).

Toward a New Culture of Sociological Inquiry: Historicity, Explanation, and Research Methods for the New Millennium—Marriott Wardman Park

Session 397, Tuesday, August 15, 10:30 a.m.-12:10 p.m.
Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 50

Leader: John R. Hall, University of California, Davis

Despite the historic turn in the human sciences, sociology has remained largely bifurcated between ahistorical approaches, which investigate social phenomena without considering how past events and long-duration processes shape the present and future, and historical sociology, which typically studies social phenomena of other times and places. This seminar erases that division, by exploring how sociology has become an epistemic domain of "integrated disparity." It will propose an integrated approach to understanding the diversity of alternative research practices in relation to each other, that will result in "historicizing" sociology as a whole, rather than treating historical sociology as a subfield. Drawing on John R. Hall, Cultures of Inquiry: From Epistemology to Discourse in Sociocultural Inquiry (Cambridge University Press, 1999), the seminar will specify eight core methodological practices of inquiry that are shared between "presentist" and "historical" sociology. These will be identified in terms of how they resolve key formative problems centered on values, the use of narrative, social theory, and the representation of historicity in explanation. By considering concrete exemplars of research, the seminar will demonstrate how even seemingly radically alternative methodologies (e.g., participant-observation, quantitative sociology, and historical-comparative sociology) share core cultural logics of inquiry, and it will explore the possibilities of resolving the problem of "translation" between seemingly radically different kinds of sociological knowledge.

Professional Workshops

Professional Workshops provide opportunities for attendees to update their knowledge and skills in a variety of professional areas. The 22 workshops on this year's program roster address research issues, career opportunities, data availability, publicity and marketing decisions, ethical dilemmas, and more. Except for session 3 below, which requires advance registration and fee payment, professional workshops are open to all meeting registrants. Please refer to the Program Summary for details on workshops.

How to Navigate Congress—Marriott Wardman Park

Session 3, Friday, August 11, 1:00-5:00 p.m.

Fee: $25

Attendance Limit: 50

Leader: Rachel Gragg

This professional workshop will tell you all you ever wanted to know about how to approach members of Congress and their staff members on the Hill. This workshop will examine the best ways for social scientists to participate in all stages of the legislative process. If you are aiming to talk about your research, address an importance issue of science policy, "educate" about enhanced support for the social sciences, or otherwise get your "message" across in informal meetings or testimony, this workshop is for you. How should you go about setting up a meeting, what should you bring, what is the most effective mode of writing, should you prepare an opening statement for an office visit, how informal can you be, how do you best anticipate questions, and how much time can you expect are just some of the questions that are "fair game" in this session. The workshop will provide information and materials that will help prepare you for meetings and presentations. Bring your questions, though. No question is too foolish in dealing with politics and navigating Congress.

Teaching Workshops

Teaching Workshops are a popular part of each Annual Meeting program. These sessions provide opportunities for attendees to enhance their teaching skills and discover ways to integrate new materials into their courses. Teaching workshops emphasize interaction between leaders and audience, and attendees are encouraged to bring questions or problems for discussion and new ideas to enliven classroom activities. Teaching Workshops are open to all meeting registrants.

Academic Workplace Workshops

Academic Workplace Workshops are a relatively new category of events at the Annual Meeting, building on the success of Teaching Workshops and Professional Workshops. The many pressing issues in higher education and the importance of chair and faculty leadership led ASA Academic and Professional Affairs Program staff to send proposals to the Program Committee for sessions designed to increase sociology's strength and effectiveness in the academic context. Similar in format to Teaching Workshops, these sessions emphasize interaction between leaders and audience, and attendees are encouraged to bring questions or problems for discussion. Academic Workplace Workshops are open to all meeting registrants.

Leading Academic Change

Seventh Annual ASA Chair Conference

Sponsored by the ASA Academic and Professional Affairs Program, the Seventh Annual ASA Chair Conference will focus on "Leading Academic Change: Rules, Roles, and Relationships for the Chair." Designed for new and current chairs at all types of institutions, the conference provides "briefings" on issues of critical importance for departmental leadership. Panels, roundtables, and informal conversation facilitate sharing information and advice. As always, attendees will meet in groups with chairs from similar institutions to discuss common issues. The ASA Research Program on the Discipline and Profession will also present data on important trends in the profession.

The conference begins at the Marriott Wardman Park on Friday, August 11, at 12:30 p.m. and concludes at 2:15 p.m. on Saturday, August 12. The registration fee includes all conference materials, coffee breaks, dessert on Friday night, and breakfast and lunch on Saturday.

The major briefing sessions will focus on:

Chairs as Leaders at the Intersection of the Discipline and Institutions: Working with Faculty and Administration

Engaging Most of the Faculty Most of the Time: Managing Resistance and Conflict, Bullying, Zero-Sum, Dead-wood!

Leadership Roles of the Chair Breakouts:

1. Mentoring New Faculty from Time of Hire through Tenure
2. Hiring and Managing Part-time and Adjunct Faculty
3. Preparing for a Program Review or Accreditation Visit
4. Moving from Herding Cats to Collective/Strategic Planning

New Roles for the Chair Breakouts:

5. Fundraising
6. Admissions and Recruitment
7. Alumni Relations and Community Outreach
8. Physical Space Planning or Renovation

Planning and Implementing Technological Improvements

Your Life as Chair Breakouts:

9. Strategic Planning for You and the Department
10. How Chairs Can Be Evaluated and Rewarded
11. Dialogue on Data: What Are Data Sources Chairs Use and Need to Do Their Work

Conference Breakout Groups

12. AA and BA Granting Institutions
13. MA Granting Institutions
14. PhD Granting Institutions

Lunch, Conversation, and Featured Speaker: Opportunities for Sociological Leadership on the Higher Education Agenda

Making the Right Hire: How to Conduct an Effective Faculty Search

Fees for the Chair Conference are $95 for chairs from Department Affiliate departments; $125 for chairs from non-affiliate departments. Please preregister for the conference when you register for the Annual Meeting. (If you have already registered, you may add the conference to your existing registration.) A full registration form is included in the center of this newsletter issue; you may also register online.

Undergraduate Advisors to Meet

Special Poster Session on Graduate Programs

What are the key elements of a strong research program for undergraduates? What are the necessary prerequisites for students to achieve maximum learning and personal growth in these experiences? How can this learning and growth be assessed? All directors of undergraduate programs are invited to participate in the discussion of these important issues and more by attending a Special Session (#203) at 2:30-4:10 p.m. on Sunday, August 13, at the Marriott Wardman Park. Led by Carla B. Howery (American Sociological Association), panelists Allen Scarborough (Augusta State University), Edward L. Kain (Southwestern University), Helen A. Moore (University of Nebraska, Lincoln), and Rogelio Saenz (Texas A&M University) will provide information and emphasize interactive discussion.

Also of importance to directors of undergraduate studies is the poster session on graduate programs, which will be held at 2:30-5:30 p.m. on Monday, August 14, at the Hilton Washington. This event is designed to brief prospective students and their advisors about graduate programs in sociology. Over fifty programs are expected to be represented; a complete listing will be included in the Final Program.

There is no fee nor preregistration requirement for these undergraduate advisor events.

Special Forum for Directors of Graduate Study

Because Directors of Graduate Study (DGS) are important leaders in shaping department policies and opportunities for effective graduate programs, ASA's Academic and Professional Affairs Program has planned a series of events to encourage exchange among sociologists in the DGS role.

On Monday, August 14, there will be events pertinent to graduate studies throughout the day. Some of these activities are open to all meeting attendees; others are open only to Directors of Graduate Study and require preregistration and fee payment.

Fees are $25 for Directors of Graduate Study from Department Affiliate departments, $45 for non-affiliate Directors of Graduate Study. Please preregister using the full registration form in the middle of this newsletter, or access the ASA website to register online.

Student Forum: A New Presence at ASA

The ASA welcomes the attendance of undergraduate and graduate students at the Annual Meeting. Special arrangements for students include discounted registration fees, special housing blocks, workshops oriented to issues of interest to students, student paper and roundtable sessions, and space for an informal Student Center.

Student Forum. In August 1998, ASA Council approved the formation of a Student Forum to facilitate students' engagement in the Association and the discipline. All students who join ASA as student members automatically become members of the Student Forum.

A group of students active in supporting the development of a Forum were asked to elect officers to serve during the initial implementation phases. The first set of officers is as follows: Chair: Patrick McGinty, University of Missouri-Columbia; Chair-elect: Lisa Geason, Michigan State University. Advisory Board: Diane Bessel, State University of New York, Buffalo; Benjamin Bolger, Stanford University; Katherine Clegg, University of Nottingham; Lisa Dobransky, Case Western Reserve University; Alex Gunz, University of Waterloo; Kevin S. Irwin, Syracuse University; Emily M. Johnson, Purdue University; Alexandra Marin, Harvard University; and Victor R. Thompson, University of Illinois, Urbana

These officers have already been hard at work on behalf of the Forum. Five student sessions are planned for the 2000 Annual Meeting; see sessions 89, 154, 308, 369, 403. Student Forum officers will be present at the Orientation for First-Time Meeting Attendees to welcome students and newcomers and will serve as co-hosts of the Student Reception. The officers will also be a visible presence throughout the meeting at the Student Center.

The Forum is also administering the ASA Student Travel Awards to assist students attending the ASA Annual Meeting (see February Footnotes). Students are encouraged to attend the 2000 Annual Meeting, meet with the Forum leadership, and participate in the formal and social events that will be held. The business meeting of the Student Forum will be held on Sunday, August 13, at 8:30-10:10 a.m. in the Hilton Washington.

Orient Yourself to the Meeting. Plan to attend the Orientation for First Time Attendees and the Welcoming Party to kick off your Annual Meeting experience. Visit the exhibit area, the ASA Bookstore, and the ASA Information Desk to acquaint yourself with meeting service areas.

Student Reception. All students registered to attend the Annual Meeting are invited to a special student reception co-hosted by the Student Forum on Monday, August 14, at 6:30-7:30 p.m.

Student Center. All students attending the Annual Meeting are welcome to use this hospitality room. The Student Center will be open from 8:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m. on Saturday through

Tuesday, August 12-15, and 8:00 a.m.-3:00 p.m. on Wednesday, August 16, to provide an informal place for students to meet, make dinner arrangements, caucus, etc. Some coffee will be provided by ASA each morning; early birds get the rewards.

Graduate School Poster Session. On Monday, August 14, from 2:30-5:30, come view the displays of graduate programs in sociology and talk to program representatives.

Data Resources and Funding Sessions. Be sure to attend poster sessions 197 and 254 to advance your work in sociology.

Student Sessions. Whether you are planning to attend graduate school, or are further along and look to employment in sociological practice or the academy, please take a look at the professional and teaching workshops. Don't let the huge program overwhelm you. Start by looking at the Student Forum sessions and then check the Topic Index posted on the website to identify other sessions in your particular areas of interest.

Student Discounts. Registration fees are substantially discounted for students; see the registration form in the middle of this newsletter for details. Students are encouraged to pre-register before June 16 to take advantage of the lowest fees. Special blocks of hotel rooms have also been arranged at two small hotels this year. Please note that roommate arrangements must be worked out privately; neither the ASA nor the hotels can assign roommates. Valid student IDs may be required at check-in to verify eligibility for student rates.

Section Activities

Section sessions and activities at the Annual Meeting are interspersed throughout the five-day schedule. These specialized sessions range in format from formal paper presentations to panels and discussion roundtables and are open to all meeting attendees, whether section members or not.

The number of sessions allocated to each Section is based on the size of the Section membership. For the 41 sections, including two section-in-information (Economic Sociology, Labor and Labor Movements), there are a total of 160 sessions/meetings scheduled.

ASA members with interests in specialized areas of sociological inquiry may join any Section of the Association. Sections promote ongoing communication among their members by publishing newsletters, supporting cooperative research ventures, recognizing outstanding work by professionals and students in their specialties, and sponsoring program activities at each Annual Meeting.

Section activities are summarized in the table below for quick reference. Meeting days are Saturday, August 12; Sunday, August 13; Monday, August 14; Tuesday, August 15; and Wednesday, August 16.

Explore DC

One of the best ways to get a feel for the people and history of the "Nation's Capital" is to take advantage of one or more of this year's Spotlight tours. This year's complement of tours are interesting and substantive, highlighting the social makeup and personality of the city—from the people that make the city what it is to the monuments that honor national history. No matter which adventure you decide to embark upon, there is one common denominator: the way to experience and learn about a city is to meet with, talk to, and learn from the people who live there.

The schedule of tours is provided below. Reservations are mandatory and may be made by completing the Tour Reservation portion of the meeting registration form and sending in the form with appropriate fees. Confirmations will be mailed prior to the Annual Meeting; tickets will accompany registration packets which may be picked up at ASA Preregistration counters in the Marriott Wardman Park hotel upon arrival at the Annual Meeting.

When making your tour reservations, please keep the following points in mind:

1. Most tour sites are accessible to persons with disabilities; however, tours are generally not accessible to attendees in wheelchairs unless alternative transportation is arranged in advance. Attendees may make such arrangements on their own or contact the ASA Executive Office via the "Accessibility Services" portion of the registration form.

2. The deadline for tour preregistration is July 23. Reservations will be accepted on a first-come, first-served basis as forms and fee payments are received in the ASA Executive Office. All fees go toward tour handling, entrance fees, and group transportation costs.

3. Fees are noted with the descriptions below and include all entrance fees. Some of the tours have options for lunch stops at local restaurants, and this cost is generally not included in the tour fee. Please read the tour descriptions carefully for clarification.

4. Limits on tour attendance are noted with the descriptions below.

5. Most tours will depart from and return to the Marriott Wardman Park. Please refer to the Final Program for the location of the orientation areas. Keep in mind that the arrival times back to the hotel are estimates only and may vary somewhat due to traffic conditions.

6. Cancellations will be accepted until July 1. If written cancellation is received before July 1, 90% of the tour fee will be refunded. Fees are non-refundable after July 1. Substantial underenrollment by July 10 could force cancellation of a tour. In that case all fees will be refunded in full.

Tour 1: War Monuments in Washington

Saturday, August 12, 12:30-4:30 p.m.

Fee: $ 15.00

Leader: David Rohall, University of Maryland

We will tour a number of war memorials in Washington, D.C., starting with a short talk about the politics of getting a military memorial erected in the D.C. area and a guided tour of the new Women in Military Service For America Memorial. We will then visit Arlington Cemetery and other surrounding sites. There are no entrance fees, but individual donations are encouraged (these are not covered by the tour price.) Contact David Rohall at drohall@socy.umd.edu if you have any questions. (Bus/walking tour; limited to 25 participants.)

Tour 2: Riverboat Cruise

Sunday, August 13, 12:30-4:00 p.m.

Fee: $ 25.00

See the majestic Washington skyline featuring the Capitol dome and the National Cathedral. Sail past the Lincoln and Jefferson Memorials, the Washington Monument and the Kennedy Center. Enjoy a leisurely cruise down the Potomac. The boat will depart from and return to historic Old Town Alexandria; bus transportation will be provided to and from the boat. (Bus/boat tour; limited to 45 participants.)

Tour 3: U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum

Monday, August 14, 9:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m.

Fee: $ 12.00

Leader: Wesley Fisher, U.S. Holocaust Research Institute

The United States Holocaust Memorial Museum is dedicated to presenting the history of the persecution and murder of six million Jews and millions of other victims of Nazi tyranny from 1933 to 1945. The Museum's primary mission is to inform Americans about this unprecedented tragedy, to remember those who suffered, and to inspire visitors to contemplate the moral implications of their choices and responsibilities as citizens in an interdependent world. — USHMM Brochure (Bus/walking tour; limited to 90 participants.)

Tour 4: Community Development Corporation

Monday, August 14, 8:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.

Fee: $ 25.00

Leader: Samantha Friedman, George Washington University

East of the River Economic Development Corporation (ERCDC) is a non-profit organization that develops and provides affordable housing, is a catalyst for economic development and increased home ownership. ERCDC facilitates economic growth and development by fostering partnerships between members of the community, the local government, developers, foundations, and financial institutions. ERCDC has been serving the Ward 8 community of neighborhoods in Washington, DC since 1988.

This tour will introduce ASA members to some of the marvelous vistas and interesting people in this captivating community as well as planned and proposed revitalization activities. (Bus/walking tour; limited to 30 participants.)

Tour 5: Georgetown University and Black Georgetown Revisited

Monday, August 14, 1:00-4:00 p.m.

Fee: $ 12.00

Leader: William McDonald, Georgetown University

While on the campus of Georgetown University, we will view a 48 minute video, consisting of oral histories by members of what was once a thriving black community in Georgetown but was significantly diminished by gentrification. The interviews are fascinating, touching, and amazingly gripping, given the simple "talking heads" format of the film. The video itself is a useful demonstration of a method for studying communities and capturing their histories. It was produced on a small budget by an African American Professor of English, as one of the faculty projects funded by the University as part of its bicentennial celebration in 1989. A book based on the project can be purchased or ordered at the Bookstore or ordered.

Tour members will then be given time to roam the University campus or to accompany the tour leader to the famous "Exorcist steps" where a very spooky inside story about the making of the film shall be revealed to tour members only. The tour will include visits to the architectural jewels of the campus including the beautifully ornate lecture hall; the restored gas-lit library; the chapel; the debating room; and the porch where many U.S. Presidents have addressed the student body during inaugural festivities. (Bus/walking tour; limited to 40 participants.)

Tour 6: The Pentagon

Tuesday, August 15, 8:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.

Fee: $ 12.00

Leader: David Segal, University of Maryland

The Pentagon, once the biggest office building in the world, has been the headquarters of the Department of Defense and the military departments since World War II. We will spend an hour on a guided walking tour of this historic building, seeing a wide range of displays, including women in the military and Medal of Honor recipients. We will then have an hour discussion with the Honorable Carolyn Becraft, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Manpower and Reserve Affairs. Secretary Becraft, a former Army officer and an Army wife, has conducted research on and been an advocate for women in the military, has served as Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense for Personnel Support, Families and Education, and in her current job, has responsibility for the Navy's personnel programs. Most sociological research and writing on the military has focused on the Army. This is an opportunity for sociologists to gain insight into a military organization that is structurally and culturally different from most sociological depictions of the military. All participants in this tour will have to have photo identification with them to enter the building. (Bus/walking tour; limited to 45 participants.)

Tour 7: Gallaudet University
 Tuesday, August 15, 8:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m.
 Fee: $15.00

Leader: Sharon Barnartt, Gallaudet University

Gallaudet University is the world's only liberal arts college for deaf students, and it was also the site of the 1988 Deaf President Now protest. While in many ways the campus looks like any other college campus (except for some buildings which are of historical interest), the deaf population in the US presents a situation of more than a passing sociological interest. This tour will examine that situation in the context of the campus.

We will begin with a tour of some campus buildings, combined with a discussion of deaf culture. It will then proceed to a panel discussion, by deaf faculty members, of social, cultural, and political issues in the deaf community. Finally, there will be a short time for people to explore the bookstore, which has a large collection of deafness-related books for sale, and/or the Deafness Collection in the library, which provides a unique resource for research; or to visit an exhibit of pictures and other information about the physiology of deafness, the history of deaf people, and communication issues for people with hearing impairments.

The tour of the campus will be led by a deaf tour guide from the Gallaudet Visitor's Center. The panel discussion will be moderated by deaf and hearing members of the Sociology Department. All events will be accessible to all people—although people needing accommodations other than sign language interpreters should request them in advance. There are no entrance fees, but the tour director is willing to incorporate lunch at the "Bistro" (attendees are responsible for lunch costs; lunch is not included in the tour price.) (Bus/walking tour; limited to 25 participants.)

Tour 8: Duke Ellington's DC
 Tuesday, August 15, 10:00 a.m.-2:30 p.m.
 Fee: $ 40.00

Sponsors: The DC Heritage Tourism Coalition, Manna Community Development Corporation, and the DC Chamber of Commerce

A half day tour will take you through this neighborhood of fine 19th century rowhouses to see three homes and many other places that inspired and shaped the young Ellington. Stroll past some of the theaters, clubs, homes, churches, schools, and other institutions that produced leaders in all fields for the nation and its capital city.

The tour includes visits to the Mary McLeod Bethune Council House National Historical Site, Lincoln Theatre, the Whitelaw Hotel, the African American Civil War Memorial, and a five block walk through historic U Street. Lunch and entertainment will be provided in the elegantly restored Whitelaw Hotel, the preferred address for Cab Calloway, Joe Louis, the Duke, and many other notables while visiting Washington, DC. (Bus/walking tour; limited to 55 participants.)

Tour 9: Washington DC in the Gilded Age
 Tuesday, August 15, 1:00-4:00 p.m.
 Fee: $ 15.00

Leader: William McDonald, Georgetown University

This tour of two magnificent homes, the Christian Heurich House and the Anderson House, provides an opportunity to appreciate many aspects of social stratification from the efficacy of "luck and pluck" to the feudal principle of primogeniture. Christian Heurich, a German immigrant of modest origins rose from rags to riches through marriages, real estate, and a brewery. His Victorian House was built in 1892-94 for $65,000, including a central vacuuming system. He worked until the day he died. His third wife, a former federal clerk, managed the household of servants and accounted for every penny spent. On the other side of Dupont Circle "society" families built grand houses where they stayed only during the social season and to which Heurich was never invited. Larz Anderson was the scion of a prominent American family whose important role in all the major events of American history is portrayed in a mural in his D.C. house, which was built in 1902-05 for $800,000 and did not include a central vacuuming system. Today the Anderson House belongs to the Society of the Cincinnati, whose membership is limited to the first male descendants of officers who fought in the American Revolution.

Tour members are asked to read Paul Fussler's Class and come prepared to recognize the principles of status enhancement in architectural and lifestyle display. Members who distinguish themselves at recognizing applications of these principles will be rewarded with a bottle of Old Heurich beer of and a copy of the self-proclaimed model syllabus on social stratification written by Bill McDonald for the course for which this tour was originally developed. (Bus/walking tour; limited to 20 participants.)

Tour 10: Southwest DC: Through Time, Into Urban Renewal and Beyond

Wednesday, August 16, 8:30-11:30 a.m.
 Fee: $ 12.00

Leader: Margaret Feldman

We will visit the Banneker Overlook for a panoramic view of SW, the Virginia hills and National Airport, and visit Waterside Mall to see a photo exhibit of old SW. We will then a drive through the neighborhood to see the buildings from Washington's time, view and discuss the SW waterfront and its part in the Civil War. We will have a broad discussion of attempts to improve the lot of working people through housing by seeing row houses built during the Progressive Era at the end of the 1800's and then the urban renewal of the 1950s and 60s and will discuss the social and economic effect on the neighborhood still today. We will drive by Ft. McNair and walk on the waterfront promenade which includes the Titanic memorial. (Bus/walking tour; limited to 25 participants.)

Film/Video Screenings

Based on the recent successes of film/video screening series, a new line-up of films and videos is being developed for the 2000 program. Two meeting rooms have been set aside at the Hilton Washington for showing recent video and film releases throughout the Annual Meeting. The listing of films/videos will be printed in the Final Program.

Special Events

Orientation for First-Time Attendees

This orientation to ASA and the Annual Meeting is a must for first-time meeting attendees. Scheduled from 3:00-4:15 p.m. on Saturday, August 12, prior to the Opening Plenary Session and Welcoming Party, this special orientation hour provides the opportunity to meet Association officers and staff and begin networking with experienced colleagues.

ASA Secretary Florence Bonner and Executive Officer Felice J. Levine host this orientation. Pointers on navigating the Annual Meeting will be shared in informal roundtable discussion. First-time attendees who pre-registered should look for an admission ticket in their badge envelopes when they pick up their program packets and come prepared to ask "what makes it work?"

Welcoming Party

All meeting registrants are invited to the Welcoming Party on Saturday, August 12, from 6:30-7:30 p.m., to celebrate the opening of the 95th Annual Meeting. This social event kicks off after the opening plenary session on the first day of the meeting.

Make new acquaintances, chat with old friends, and find a first-time meeting attendee to befriend. New members and first-time meeting attendees are particularly encouraged to come and have fun!

Honorary Reception

All meeting attendees are invited to attend the Honorary Reception at 6:30 p.m., Sunday, August 13, to express appreciation, congratulations, and best wishes to President Feagin and the major ASA award recipients on this festive occasion.

Since 1984, the American Sociological Association has been joined by social science departments and regional societies in co-sponsoring the annual Honorary Reception that follows the President's address. Donors and sponsors of this year's reception will be announced in the Final Program. If your department or institution would like to sponsor in this event, please contact the ASA Executive Office (202-383-9005, x315; executive.office@asanet.org) to request a pledge form.

MFP Benefit Reception

Set aside time during the busy weekend to join good friends and supporters of the ASA's Minority Fellowship Program (MFP). Plan to relax after dinner, satisfy your sweet tooth, and meet current Fellows and MFP alumni. Please attend this special event and reaffirm your commitment to the MFP Program.

Sunday, August 13, 2000
 9:30-11:00 p.m.
 Hilton Washington

$25—donor; $50—sponsor; $100—benefactor

Admission is by ticket only. A portion of each ticket price will go to the Minority Fellowship Program, which supports predoctoral training for students of color. Please purchase your tickets in advance when you preregister for the meeting. Use the registration form in the middle of this newsletter to specify your contribution level and reserve your MFP Benefit ticket. Some tickets may be available on site, but availability cannot be guaranteed.

Just Desserts! A Teaching Enhancement Fundraiser

Escape the fast pace of paper sessions, book displays, and convention life to unwind with friends at the benefit event for the Teaching Enhancement Fund (TEF), "Just Desserts." As the name implies, if your energy is flagging, enjoy special desserts, good coffee, stimulating conversation, and smile that all of this pleasure goes to a good cause.

Sunday, August 13, 2000
 9:00-11:00 p.m.
 Hilton Washington
 $25—donor, $50—sponsor

Admission is by ticket only. A major portion of each ticket price will go toward supporting the Teaching Enhancement Fund, a small grants program designed to support teaching-related projects that have long lasting and transferable impact. Please purchase your tickets in advance when you preregister for the meeting. Use the registration form in the middle of this newsletter to specify your contribution level and reserve your ticket to "Just Desserts." A few tickets may be available on site, but availability cannot be guaranteed.

Community College Faculty Breakfast

Colleagues teaching in community colleges are invited to a special bagel breakfast at 7:00 a.m. on Sunday, August 13. Please join this occasion to meet with other sociologists teaching at community colleges.

Departmental Alumni Night (DAN)

Be sure your meeting schedule for Monday, August 14, includes the 27th annual Departmental Alumni Night (DAN), where sociologists from around the world meet to reminisce about graduate school days, create new coalitions, and catch up on the latest news! The gathering will begin at 10:00 p.m. and plenty of time is provided for chatting with colleagues and alumni.

Each graduate department of sociology in the United States and Canada is given the opportunity to sponsor a table to attract alumni and friends. Tables will also be provided for sociologists in business and industry as well as for international scholars and guests. Other groups wishing to participate by sponsoring a table are requested to contact the ASA Executive Office before June 30.

Invitations were mailed to graduate departments of sociology in April. DAN provides departments with the opportunity to have an alumni gathering without the considerable expense of arranging one. Only a small fee is charged to assist in covering expenses for this affair. Remind your department chair to reserve a table before the end of June!

In Remembrance

At the beginning of the Presidential Plenary (Sunday, August 13, 4:30-6:10 p.m.), there will be a "Moment of Silence" to remember those members of the profession who died during the past year. Names submitted to Footnotes since last year's Annual Meeting are listed below. If you know of other sociologists who should be on this list but whose names do not appear below, please contact ASA Meeting Services (202-383-9005, x305; meetings@asanet.org).

Services

Registration

Fees. Registration categories and fees are shown on the form in the center of this newsletter. Preregistration forms were also sent to all members last fall with the Call for Papers, and online registration has been open since April. You may register online now via a secure server, or download the registration form from the website to sign up for the 2000 Annual Meeting and the various services, special events and conferences, seminars and workshops, and tours.

Spouse/Guest Registration. One spouse/guest registration is permitted with each full registration. A Spouse/Guest registration provides a name badge only (name only, no affiliation). Any spouse/guest who wants a program packet and access to didactic seminars and pre-meeting conferences or workshops must register individually and pay the full registration fee.

Addition to an Existing Registration. Those who have already paid their general registration fees may add events and services to their existing registrations. Simply check off the appropriate items on the full registration form and remit the appropriate fee payment. A revised confirmation will be mailed showing the update to your registration activities.

Confirmations. Registration confirmations will be mailed on a weekly basis until preregistration closes on July 23. Attendees who miss the July 23rd deadline should bring their paperwork with them to the meeting and go to the ASA On-

Site Registration area at the Marriott Wardman Park for registration processing.

Preregistration Pickup. Attendees who mail or fax their registrations by July 23 may pick up badges, program packets, and special tickets at the Preregistration counters at the Marriott Wardman Park hotel.

On Site Registration. Those who miss the July 23 preregistration deadline should bring their registration form and payment with them to the On-Site Registration area at the Marriott Wardman Park.

Registration Service Hours.

Friday, August 11	1:30-8:00 p.m.
Saturday, August 12	8:00 a.m.-5:30 p.m.
Sunday, August 13	8:00 a.m.-5:30 p.m.
Monday, August 14	8:00 a.m.-5:30 p.m.
Tuesday, August 15	8:00 a.m.-5:30 p.m.
Wednesday, August 16	8:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m.

Reminder: Access to all ASA services is restricted to meeting registrants. Badges are required for entry to the ASA Exhibits, Employment Service, Child Care Service, and Paper Sales areas. Also, attendance at events which require fee payment (e.g., Didactic Seminars, Chair Conference, Director of Graduate Studies Series, TEF Just Desserts, MFP Benefit, Tours, Workshops) is restricted to those who have registered for the meeting.

Refunds/Cancellations. Cancellation notice must be made in writing. 90% of non-participant registration fees will be refunded if written cancellation is received before July 1. Cancellations and refund requests received after July 1 will not be accepted. All fees are non-refundable after July 1, 2000. Unfortunately, under no circumstances can ASA issue refunds for no-shows.

Program participant registration fees are non-refundable; cancellations will not be accepted nor refunds issued.

Duplicate Payments. The 90% refund policy applies to any and all duplicate payments. If you fax your registration form with a credit card authorization, do not send a confirming copy by mail.

Accessibility Resources and Services

The ASA offers several services and oversight arrangements to facilitate attendance at the Annual Meeting.

Comfort Zone. Attendees coping with illness, meeting fatigue, or stress may use the small room at the Hilton Washington or the Marriott Wardman Park set aside by ASA as a "safe haven" to escape briefly from the noise and bustle of meeting activities. This space is provided in response to concerns brought to the ASA Council by the Sociologists' AIDS Network, Sociologists' Lesbian and Gay Caucus, and the ASA Committee on Society and Persons with Disabilities.

Sessions. ASA will make arrangements for sign language interpreters, sighted guides, and other communication avenues for meeting registrants. Please use the "Accessibility Services" portion of the registration form to identify the sessions you plan to attend.

Housing. When making their hotel reservations, attendees may request wheelchair accessible rooms, bathrooms with safety equipment (grab bars), amplified telephone receivers, closed captioned TV equipment, TDD access, "shake awake" alarms, and other resources. If you wish the ASA Executive Office to verify that your request(s) will be honored, please fill out the Accessibility Services portion of the registration form or send a copy of your reservation confirmation with the equipment request noted to: ASA Special Housing, 1307 New York Avenue, NW, Suite 700, Washington, DC 20005-4701; or fax 202-638-0882.

Travel. Attendees with mobility impairments who are flying in and out of the DC area are advised to notify their airline 24 hours before departure if they will need assistance in getting from their arrival gate to the baggage claim area. Airline and airport personnel will gladly assist any meeting attendee needing transportation aid. With 24-hour advance reservation, SuperShuttle offers accessible bus/shuttle service; call 1-800-BlueVan (1-800-258-3826) to make a reservation or get more information about accessible transportation.

Local Information. The Washington DC Convention & Visitors Association has a free handout detailing general accessibility of Washington hotels, restaurants, shopping malls, and attractions. For a copy, write WCVA, 1212 New York Avenue, NW, #600, Washington, DC 20005; call 202-789-7000 or fax 202-789-7037.

Other Services. If you have a physical disability and need special services, equipment, or accommodations, please fill out the Accessibility Services portion of the registration form or call ASA Meeting Services (202-383-9005, x305) to arrange for the necessary services. If you do not notify ASA in advance of your arrival at the meeting site, ASA may not be able to provide appropriate services due to the limited availability of some equipment and services. Every effort will be made to assist attendees on-site, but the best guarantee is to send in an Accessibility Services request before preregistration closes on July 23.

Should you encounter any problems during the meeting week or need any additional information while at the Annual Meeting, please see Meeting Services staff in the on-site ASA Office.

Child Care

ASA is continuing the tradition of providing an innovative program of activities for children of Annual Meeting registrants. Arrangements have again been made with KiddieCorp to offer a full child care program from 8:00 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. on August 12-16 for children between the ages of 6 months to 12 years.

KiddieCorp is dedicated to providing quality child care services across the nation for meeting attendees. Staffing will be based on a 1:2 ratio for children 6 months to 1 year, 1:3 ratio for children 1-2 years of age, and a 1:5 ratio for children 3-12 years of age. The program includes a customized hourly schedule of creative and educational activities, age-appropriate toys and games, popular arts and crafts projects, and child-pleasing movies and cartoon videos.

The non-refundable preregistration deposit is $50 per child. The deposit will be applied to the daily usage fees on-site. Daily use fees per preregistered child are $50 per full day, $30 per half day (8:30 a.m.-1:30 p.m.). For children using the service for shorter periods, the half-day fee will apply to encourage stable populations. Fees include on-site activities and snacks; lunch is not included but meal arrangements can be made through KiddieCorp.

Several financial assistance scholarships are available which will provide reduced daily usage fees for children of unemployed or low-income members/students. To apply for a scholarship, write a letter identifying your membership status and requesting a child care scholarship and attach it to your registration form. Be sure to fill out the Child Care Registration portion of the form, provide daily usage estimates, and remit the basic child care preregistration deposit.

There is no guarantee that non-preregistered families can be accommodated on-site. Last year it was not possible to accept non-preregistered children into the service. If there are any openings, fees for children who were not preregistered will be $75 per day per child.

To preregister, simply fill out the Child Care Registration portion of the meeting registration form and remit the appropriate preregistration deposit with your meeting registration payment. Parents/guardians using these services must be registrants for the Annual Meeting. The preregistration deposit is non-refundable. However, if the required minimum enrollment is not reached and the service is cancelled, all deposits will be refunded.

Paper Sales

All session papers submitted to the ASA Paper Sales Service by July 12 will be available in the Paper Sales area of the ASA bookstore at the Marriott Wardman Park. Meeting attendees may purchase papers for $3.00 each; these fees go toward service setup and operation costs. Authors who indicated that they would bring copies with them to the Annual Meeting are urged to deliver them to the Paper Sales area as soon as possible upon arrival.

The Paper Sales/Bookstore hours are 8:00 a.m.-5:30 p.m. on Saturday through Tuesday, August 12-15, and 8:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m. on Wednesday, August 16.

Copies of papers will not be available from the Executive Office either prior to or following the Annual Meeting. Authors must be contacted directly if copies of papers are not available in the Paper Sales Room nor accessible through the Sociological Abstracts document delivery service (Sociology*Express).

Employment Service

The American Sociological Association assists sociologists and prospective employers by sponsoring an Employment Service during each year's Annual Meeting. This service augments the monthly Employment Bulletin, now available in print and online as part of ASA's home page (<http://www.asanet.org>). The 95th ASA Annual Meeting will be held on August 12-16, 2000, at the Hilton Washington hotel and the Marriott Wardman Park hotel in Washington, DC.

The 2000 Employment Service will be open at the Marriott Wardman Park from 1:00-5:00 p.m. on Friday, August 11; and from 8:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Saturday-Tuesday, August 12-15. The Service will not be open on Wednesday, August 16.

Fees for using the Employment Service are $125 for employers, $20 for candidates who are members of ASA, and $35 for non-member candidates. Anyone using this service must also be a paid registrant for the Annual Meeting. All employer listings must be prepaid (a valid purchase will be accepted); post-meeting billing is not available.

Forms for listing positions (Employer Forms) and applications for individuals (Candidate Profile Forms) are printed in the center of this newsletter. Copies may also be downloaded the website or obtained from the June and July issues of the Employment Bulletin. Simply fill out the pertinent form—please type or use black ink—and return it with your meeting registration and appropriate payment. Please note that the Candidate Profile is limited to one side of one page.

Facilities will be available at the Marriott Wardman Park for reviewing position listings, exchanging messages, and interviewing. Position listings supplied by preregistered employers will be available for viewing by candidates when the Service opens on Friday afternoon, August 11. Listings supplied by employers who register on-site will be posted as listings are received and processed.

Profiles of preregistered candidates received by July 1 will be sent to pre-registered employers prior to the Annual Meeting. This will allow interviewers to review candidate information prior to arrival at the meeting site and will speed the process of setting up screening interviews with the Service on-site. Candidate profiles received after July 1 will not be supplied to employers until the candidate files have been activated on-site.

All initial interview appointments are to be scheduled through the Employment Service at the meeting site. Since employers need some time to reread profiles, there will be a lag time between on-site activation of a candidate file and the scheduling of interviews. Because of this processing/review time, those intending to make full use of the service should preregister no later than June 25 or activate their profiles on-site by 5:00 p.m. on August 11. No new candidate files will be activated on the last day of Employment Service operation (Tuesday, August 15).

Preregistered candidates should report to the Exhibit Hall C in the Marriott Wardman Park as soon as possible after arrival in DC to activate their candidate profiles and deliver two copies, three-hole punched, of their complete resumes to the Service. These resumes will be used to create two supplemental resume reference books for use by registered employers during the meeting. For candidates unable to preregister, it is recommended that you visit the Employment Service as early as possible upon arriving in DC in order to start the required processing.

To register for the Employment Service, return the appropriate form and fee payment with your Annual Meeting registration form to: ASA Employment Service, P.O. Box 80248, Baltimore, MD 21280-0248.

Employment Service pre-registration closes on July 23. After that date, service users must bring forms and payment with them to the meeting site.

During the Annual Meeting in Chicago last year, 63 employers listed 137 positions, including more than 50 openings outside academia. 313 candidates registered with the Service, and nearly 1,100 interviews were scheduled.

ASA Bookstore

Building on its successful premiere in 1998, the ASA Bookstore features works published by the Association. Located near the ASA Employment Service at the Marriott Wardman Park, the Bookstore will be staffed by ASA Executive Office personnel and open throughout the five days of the Annual Meeting during the same hours as ASA Registration.

This year the Paper Sales Service will combine with the ASA Bookstore to provide one-stop shopping for on-site materials and products. The Bookstore hours are 8:00 a.m.-5:30 p.m. on Saturday through Tuesday, August 12-15, and 8:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m. on Wednesday, August 16.

All attendees are welcome to browse through this area filled with recent journal issues, timely books, teaching resources and syllabi sets, career publications, sociological practice materials, and directories and reference volumes.

Media Office

Media representatives are invited to attend the 2000 ASA Annual Meeting. For information and assistance prior to the meeting, please contact the ASA Public Information Office, 202-383-9005, x320; pubinfo@asanet.org.

During the Annual Meeting, media representatives are invited to check in at ASA's on-site Media Office for registration packets and interview assistance. The Media Office will be located on the lobby level at the Marriott Wardman Park. Hours will be 1:00-5:00 p.m. on Friday, August 11; 8:00 a.m.-5:30 p.m. on Saturday-Tuesday, August 12-15; and 8:00 a.m.-1:00 p.m. on Wednesday, August 16.

Meeting attendees are also encouraged to contact the Executive Office prior to the meeting or stop by the on-site Media Office and provide information on their availability to discuss their work with the media while in Washington, DC.

Exhibits

The ASA Exhibits will be located in the Exhibit Hall at the Hilton Washington. Exhibits will be open to meeting registrants from 9:00 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on Sunday-Tuesday, August 13-15.

The location of the Exhibits offers excellent accessibility to meeting attendees, due to its close proximity to session rooms. Always one of the most popular activities at the Annual Meeting, Exhibits offer variety, convenience, and an opportunity to discover current trends in sociological publishing, information processing, and services.

Plan your schedule now to include several visits to the 2000 ASA Exhibits to browse through the latest publications, explore current computer hardware and software, chat with representatives of statistical bureaus, and meet the editor of your next publication!

Combined Book Exhibit

The ASA invites publishers and authors to join the ASA-sponsored Combined Book Exhibit to be held during the 2000

Annual Meeting in DC. For only $75 per title, we will display each book face out and include information on the book in the Combined Book Catalog. The Catalog will also include special order forms for attendees to use following the Annual Meeting.

The ASA Combined Book Exhibit (CBE) will be located in a prominent booth in the Exhibit Hall. To include your title(s), please see listing form on the back page of this issue or download the CBE form from the ASA website. For additional information, contact the ASA Publications Department (202-383-9005, x330). The reservation form with payment and two copies of each title must be received by July 1.

Housing and Travel

Hotel Accommodations

The 95th ASA Annual Meeting will be held at the Hilton Washington and the Marriott Wardman Park hotels on August 12-16, 2000. Program sessions and social events will be held at both hotels.

The ASA Exhibits, Poster Sessions, Child Care Service, and Student Center will be at the Hilton Washington. ASA Registration, Employment Service, and Bookstore/Paper Sales will be located at the Marriott Wardman Park. There will be regular shuttle bus service between the Hilton Washington and the Marriott Wardman Park throughout the ASA meeting dates.

Room rates (excluding applicable taxes) are:
Hilton Washington: $130 single, $145 double, $160 triple, $175 quad.
Marriott Wardman Park: $130 single, $145 double, $175 triple, $205 quad

A small portion of the room rate will be rebated to the Association to cover shuttle transportation costs.

Arrangements for student housing have been made with the Washington Courtyard Northwest, across from the Hilton Washington, and the Embassy Square Summerfield Suites near Dupont Circle. Rates at the Embassy Square are $99 single/double, $119 triple/quad. The Washington Courtyard rates are $95 single/double, $110 triple, $125 quad. Please note that room rates do not include applicable taxes (currently 14.5%). Valid student IDs may be required at check-in to verify eligibility for student rates.

Reservations. Contact Travel Technology Group (TTG), the official housing and travel management company for the Annual Meeting, to make your hotel reservation. Reservations made be made online via the ASA website (www.asanet.org), or you may call, fax, or e-mail your request.

Room rates and instructions for making reservations are provided at the TTG site. Please read deposit and cancellation information carefully. A first-night deposit via credit card or check is required to hold your room reservation, and the hotels will process the deposit charge by the reservation cutoff date.

The cutoff date for reservations is July 12, 2000. Make your hotel reservation as soon as possible! August is a busy convention time in DC, and guest rooms are in demand.

Rooms at the ASA rates are available on a first-come, first-served basis only. Room blocks usually fill before the announced reservation cutoff deadline. When room blocks are filled, no additional reservations will be accepted. If any room block does not fill, availability of rooms at ASA rates after July 12 is at the discretion of the hotel.

Special Requests: When you make your hotel reservation, you may request a wheelchair accessible room, bathroom with safety equipment (grab bars), amplified telephone receiver, closed captioned TV equipment, TDD access, "shake awake" alarm, and other resources to make your stay more comfortable. If you wish the ASA Executive Office to verify that your request(s) will be honored, please send a copy of your reservation confirmation with the equipment request noted to: ASA Special Housing, 1307 New York Avenue, N.W., Suite 700, Washington, DC 20005-4701; or fax 202-638-0882.

Travel Arrangements

The American Sociological Association is pleased to announce that Travel Technology Group, Ltd. (TTG) has been appointed travel coordinator for the 2000 ASA Annual Meeting. Arrangements have been made to offer special fares on American Airlines, Delta Airlines, and Continental Airlines. TTG guarantees lowest airfare on any airline, special negotiated fares of up to 10% off the lowest fares, and $100,000 free flight insurance when booking through TTG. Call 1-800-631-5353 (from the U.S. or Canada) for complete details. For your convenience, you may also fax or e-mail your travel inquiries to TTG at 312-329-9513, asa@ttgonline.com. Be sure to include your preferred dates and times of travel.

 ASA Annual Meeting, P.O. Box 80248, Baltimore, MD 21280-0248, USA; or fax to (202) 638-0882.

Deadline: Forms and payments must be postmarked/faxed no later than June 15 to be eligible for the early registration discount. Registrations postmarked/faxed June 16-July 16 are ineligible for the discount and will be processed at the higher rate. Preregistration closes on July 16. Registration materials postmarked/faxed after July 16 will not be available at Preregistration Pickup; late registrants should go to the ASA Situations Desk at the Marriott Wardman Park to locate their paperwork and begin their registration processing.

Program Participants: All program participants are required to preregister in order to have their names listed in the Final Program. Program participant registration fees are non-refundable. Only one registration fee payment is required from a participant. If additional payments are received, 90% of duplicate fees will be refunded.

Program participants who have already paid for registration may add events and services to their general registration by checking off the appropriate items and remitting the appropriate fee payment. Write "PREREG" on the registration summary line and enter totals for the desired events and services selected on the reverse side of the form. A revised confirmation will be sent showing the update to your registration activities.

Refunds/Cancellations: Cancellation notice must be made in writing. 90% of non-participant registration fees will be refunded if written cancellation is received before July 1. Cancellations and refund requests received after July 1 will not be accepted. All fees are non-refundable after July 1, 2000. Unfortunately, under no circumstances can ASA issue refunds for no-shows.

Program participant registration fees are non-refundable; cancellations will not be accepted nor refunds issued.

Duplicate Payments: The 90% refund policy applies to any and all duplicate payments. If you fax your registration form with a credit card authorization, do not send a confirming copy by mail.

Total Fees: Remittance in US funds must accompany this form. Check here if accessibility services are requested on the reverse side:

Mount Pleasant neighborhoods, according to Cynthia Garza, the Council's director of advocacy and community relations and caseworker for the transitional housing partnership program.

In a recent interview, Ms. Garza discussed the Council's efforts to understand and address housing issues for Latinos. Both the negative impact of little to no affordable housing and the ongoing gentrification of the Adams Morgan, Columbia Heights, and Mount Pleasant neighborhoods are critical issues for DC Latinos. Indeed, the lack of affordable housing has contributed significantly to the displacement of Latinos from DC to the Washington suburbs.

While gentrification is often viewed in positive terms, Ms. Garza explained how it negatively contributes to the rising costs for housing, causing an economic barrier for many Latinos. As Latinos rent cheaper, substandard apartments, their quality of life diminishes. Ms. Garza told of Latino tenants who refuse to pay rent in an effort to get landlord improvements but are often evicted. Other Latinos share housing with others, which tends to lead to evictions because of overcrowding. In sum, many Latinos live in precarious housing situations, which contributes to a growing pool of clients needing housing assistance, including families and single income households. According to Ms. Garza, the intersection of housing and gender is of particular importance to Latinos. As women attempt to remove themselves from family violence and secure housing, many encounter little help because the DC area seriously lacks culturally appropriate shelters for Latinas in addition to few housing options.

The Council and its member agencies continue to educate DC residents about priority issues to the District's Latino population and to encourage active community participation at various levels. For example, the Council sponsors marches in the District and helps clients to become familiar with advisory panels for various city departments. These priority areas continue to drive much of the work accomplished on behalf of is only loosely coupled with the symbolic elements of its process. In effect, the manifest goal promotes scientific scholarship but the latent outcome creates greater homogeneity among a set of comparable institutions, promoting the influence of external factors in the allocation of status or power (e.g., perceived market value of an institution's degree). The result, as I demonstrate in the American Educational Research Journal (Fall 1999), produces greater homogeneity within universities and greater heterogeneity between them with respect to organizational status. In conclusion, linear models of purposive action employed to explain organizational status are largely reflective of well-intentioned, albeit simplistic, myths of complex processes.

An improved understanding of organizational status will require a greater awareness of the specific institutional context in which it is embedded.

No "Reserve Army" of Faculty

In his April 2000 comment, Professor Robert Stevenson suggests that departments with high rates of publications in the top three journals—American Sociological Review, the American Journal of Sociology, and Social Forces—may be achieving their high productivity through the help of a "reserve army" of part-time faculty members who "free up" the full-time faculty for research and writing. Stevenson's claim, however, is based on a misunderstanding of the data in Barry Markovsky's article in the February Footnotes.

In that article Professor Markovsky ranked departments by publication rates per faculty, using data from the 1999 ASA Guide to Graduate Departments of Sociology to determine numbers of full- and part-time faculty in each department. Based on these data, Professor Stevenson then reported part-time faculty as a percentage of full-time faculty for the departments that ranked the highest on journal productivity. Stevenson's calculations place Arizona in a dubious second place on this measure, with part-time faculty equal to 73% of full-time faculty.

There is just one problem with these data: Markovsky's use of the "part-time faculty" label was an abbreviation of the actual designation in the ASA Guide, which is "Affiliated and Joint Appointments, Part-time and Emeritus." At the University of Arizona, not one of the 16 faculty listed under this heading is a part-time faculty member, and the amount of teaching done by the entire group is miniscule. Seven of the 16 are emeritus faculty who do not teach in the department at all; four are courtesy appointments whose teaching obligations are solely within their home departments; two are joint appointments whose teaching obligations in Sociology are one course every other year, and three are faculty members who hold visiting appointments each spring and sometimes team-teach one course—typically a graduate seminar—with a regular member of the faculty.

BA Growth Trend: Sociology Overtakes Economics

by Roberta Spalter-Roth, Director
ASA Research Program on the Profession and the Discipline

The number of Bachelor of Arts (BA) degrees awarded in sociology is an indicator of the health and well being of the academic profession. Sociology is more dependent on undergraduate students as its material base than some other comparable social science disciplines. As Figure 1 shows more than nine out of 10 of the degrees awarded in 1997 were Bachelor's degrees.¹ This ratio has remained constant since the mid-1960s, during years of decline and growth in the number of BAs awarded. The number of new BAs awarded in sociology peaked in 1973, with a high of 35,996 and bottomed in 1985 with a low of 12,165. The number of new BAs rebounded slowly during the remainder of the 1980s. In the 1990s the growth rate became more dramatic.

As Table 1 shows, from 1991 through 1997, the number of sociology BAs grew from 17,632 to 24,750, for an increase of 40 percent. During the same time period, the number of BAs awarded in political science and economics fell. Political science, which awarded the most BAs of the three disciplines, experienced a 15 percent drop, and economics experienced a 30 percent drop. In fact, the number of BAs awarded in economics and in sociology reversed almost exactly over the seven-year period. By 1997, almost 25,000 BAs were awarded in sociology in contrast to only 17,700 in economics.

Some pundits suggest that, under current circumstances of academic restructuring, the growth in sociology BAs will result in an increased hiring of adjunct faculty or a decrease in PhD selectivity in order to have enough teachers for undergraduates. Although this scenario is possible, our own prior research suggests that BA growth in sociology during the 1990s has stimulated additional growth. Data show a moderate increase in applicants to graduate sociology departments, a greater selectivity in graduate school acceptances, a higher share of graduate students receiving funding, a modest increase in the number of new PhDs, an increase in Employment Bulletin job listings for new PhDs, and an increased share of academic departments hiring new faculty.² The increase in sociology BAs appears to be a sign of increased vigor at all stages of the academic pipeline.

Footnotes

¹Sociology awarded a higher percentage of its degrees to Bachelor's of Arts or Sciences than did either economics (81 percent) or political science (only 70 percent because fully 25 percent of political science degrees are awarded as Masters Degrees mostly in Public Policy or Public Administration).

²Some of these data can be seen in "After the Fall" in the February 1998 issue of Footnotes, some are unpublished data from the 1997-98 Graduate Department Survey presented at Chairs conferences and Graduate Director's meetings at ASA annual meetings. □

In short, Arizona does not have a reserve army of part-timers who do the bulk of the teaching, and our research productivity is unrelated to the number of faculty who were reported in this category. Our faculty carry a full teaching load—and win numerous awards for their undergraduate teaching—at the same time that they produce stellar research records. The same errors of interpretation that invalidate Stevenson's assumptions about Sociology at Arizona may also affect his interpretation of other top-ranked departments. Most importantly, the composition of this category of affiliated, joint, part-time, and emeritus faculty undoubtedly varies across departments, making it impossible to infer anything about a relationship between part-time faculty and academic productivity.

Footnotes Deserves a Pulitzer

If ever a Pulitzer Prize is awarded to a professional newsletter, the April 2000 issue of Footnotes deserves it. Newsletters preparing their membership for an annual meeting commonly describe distinctive attractions of the city in which the meeting is to be held. These features however, are invariably obfuscating travelogues rather than insightful accounts about what the city is really like and what it represents. James W. Loewen's penetrating feature on "The Sociology of Selected Monuments of Washington" is different because it directs our attention to commemorative devices that Americans use to represent their history to themselves and others.

From the Library of Congress's consecration of Social Darwinism to the monuments commemorating Christopher Columbus's discovering the world to be around, Abraham Lincoln's standing above a groveling slave, and former Klan Leader Albert Pike's exploits, Loewen's tour captures perfectly President Joe Feagin's theme for the American Sociological Association's millennial meeting — Oppression, Domination, and Liberation. Although Americans are less oppressed, less dominated, and more liberated than ever before, Loewen's tour is a bracing antidote to this false-consciousness. Given the limits of space, within which Loewen was forced to work, I would like to add few more stops to his tour.

Let us begin at Arlington Cemetery. While ASA members are inspecting the Confederate Monument, they might wish to look behind them and see the Custis-lee Mansion, residence of Robert E. Lee, Mary Custis Lee (George Washington's Great-grand daughter) and their 200 slaves. Near the Cemetery, one will find the gigantic Marine Iwo Jima Statue—a monument to American triumphalism.

On the mall the visitor may enjoy the Korean War Veterans Memorial and Frederick Hart's Vietnam Veterans Memorial statue. These commemorative objects warrant attention because of their masking functions: they depict the diversity of racial and ethnic participation in the two wars in order to cover up a racially segregated division of labor. The two memorials are marvelous specimens of mystification in bronze. Not far from these sites is the Franklin Delano Roosevelt Memorial Park, a hegemonic celebration of late capitalism. Visitors with several hours to spare may wish to visit another hegemonic site, the Holocaust Museum: focusing on Nazi Germany's crimes against European Jews deflects attention from America's crimes against native blacks, Hispanics, and indigenous peoples.

Speaking of indigenous peoples, ASA members must pay a visit to the United States Capitol, in whose Rotunda appear eight gigantic paintings representing the glories of America's past: included are The Baptism of Pocahontas, a hieratic depiction of colonial devaluing of beginning is what is now Tampa and covering the entire southeast. Then go directly to the Capitol's Statuary Hall to see larger than life statues of Jefferson Davis, John C. Calhoun, and other criminals. Elsewhere, in the Senate wing, are the busts of Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew.

Other members might conclude their tour by strolling from the Capitol directly toward the Lincoln Memorial. On their way they must take note of the statue of Ulysses Grant, Union Army commander and Jew-hater. After Grant they will approach the tallest structure in Washington an obelisk commemorating You-Know-Who. Concluding their tour, they will find the one exception to James Loewen's deconstructive travelogue: The Lincoln Memorial, site of Marian Anderson's concert and Martin Luther King's speech. Lincoln we can easily infer, is the one white character in American history (besides John Brown) who Loewen admires, but, alas, when visitors actually go inside the memorial and look toward the ceiling they see a colorful mural depicting two females, allegories of the North and the South, clasping hands in a dramatic gesture of reconciliation. This Lincoln Memorial, designed as a symbol of regional reconciliation, garnered every single Southern Representative's vote in favor of construction. As to Loewen's acclaiming Lincoln's Second Inaugural Address affirming slavery as the Civil War's cause, we must ask a question about Lincoln's first Inaugural Address: why did he offer the Confederacy, in return for its remaining in the Union, a constitutional amendment perpetuating slavery in the states where it existed?

Except for this minor oversight, James W. Loewen's article is to be commended, as is the editorial staff that selected it. I urge the American Sociological Association's publicity department to send copies of the April issue of Footnotes to all major newspapers. Public dissemination of this newsletter will help offset the all too commonly held stereotype which confuses sociologists with "socialists," "social workers," "socialist workers," and sometimes even causes people to dismiss them as leftist nuts or aging 1960s Flower Children. Now, thanks to James Loewen's sociological imagination, all Americans planning their family visits to Washington will be able to see America the way it really was.

PUBLICATIONS

Book on Emotional Experience in College Classrooms. We invite abstracts/proposals/papers on all aspects of the emotional life of the college classroom. We are looking for a range of articles, including empirically grounded work, discussions of theoretical issues, analyses of micro-macro linkages, and studies addressing methods or tools for "managing" emotion in the classroom. Our goal is to create a book that examines the rich, emotional texture of teaching-learning in the complex and changing world of higher education. Abstracts/proposals for articles should be approximately two pages in length. Full paper submissions should be 10-20 pages in length. Deadline for submissions is October 1, 2000. For information and submissions, contact: Bob Rosenwein, Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Lehigh University, Bethlehem, PA 18015-3169, e-mail RER6@lehigh.edu; or Kay Valentine, Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Nazareth College, Rochester, NY 14618, e-mail cgvalent@naz.edu.

Community College Journal of Research and Practice (CCJRP) solicits papers about developments being innovated and tested by those engaged in the study of community colleges and community college education. Timely reviews of subjects and books will be considered. All papers must conform to the specifications contained in the Publication Manual of the American Psychological Association, 4th edition, 1994. Papers that do not adhere to this style will be returned. All papers should contain an abstract (single-spaced on a separate page) which does not exceed 250 words. An original and two copies of each manuscript, which has not been published before, should be submitted to: D. Barry Lumsden, Editor, Community College Journal of Research and Practice, University of North Texas, P.O. Box 311337, Denton, TX 75203-1337; (940) 565-4074; fax (940) 369-7177.

International Journal of Educational Policy, Research, and Practice. Call for papers for a special issue on "Educating Homeless and Street Children." This issue will present an international perspective on research, policy, and practice for educating homeless and street children. Deadline for submissions is July 1, 2000. Send submissions to: Roslyn Mickelson, Department of Sociology, University of North Carolina-Charlotte, 9201 University City Blvd., Charlotte, NC 28223; e-mail rmickl@emil.uncc.edu.

Journal of Contemporary Ethnography invites submissions for a special issue. Theme: "Ethnography Under the Gun: Fieldwork in War Zones and Post-Conflict Settings." Deadline for submission of papers is August 1, 2000. Selected papers will appear in the October 2001 issue. Contact the special issue editor: John T. Obituaries

Donald Adamchak (1952-2000)

Donald J. (Adam) Adamchak, 48, died of cancer at his home in Manhattan, Kansas, on March 16, 2000. Adam was born in Bayonne, New Jersey on February 27, 1952. After graduating high school in Jersey City, he attended Ohio University (BGS) before going to Western Kentucky University (MA) and Bowling Green State University (PhD, Sociology, 1978). In the fall of 1978 he joined the sociology faculty at Kansas State University. He remained an active and productive member of the graduate and undergraduate programs in sociology up until a few days before his death.

At KSU, Adam anchored the concentration in social demography, preparing scores of graduate students, many of them international, for careers in research and teaching in social demography. He was exceptionally active in the graduate program through both his formal and his informal mentoring of many students in addition to his teaching. Adam, an active member of sixty-one MA and PhD committees and major professor for 17 masters and 12 doctoral degrees, was ever alert to opportunities that would help students' careers, and he encouraged and nurtured them into their professions. He always involved students in his research, collaborating with many students and former students. (His last vita listed current or recent departmental graduate students as co-authors of eight 1999 and 2000 publications.) Adam's students always "hit the ground running" in terms of their research and academic careers after KSU. New graduate students in the program quickly realized that he was an invaluable source of practical, career-related information and he was eager to share this information one-on-one, helping them to navigate through their programs and into their careers. Adam's concern for, and his commitment to his students was all consuming. Literally during his last days, he was reading theses and preparing students for employment interviews. In recognition, at the spring commencement this year Adam was awarded a Graduate School Distinguished Service Award for his outstanding contributions to graduate education at KSU.

Adam's research concerned the role of population factors in development; fertility transitions; family and family planning; the status of women/gender relations; ageing and intergenerational support; and the social demographic aspects of AIDS/HIV in developing countries. He was awarded a Rockefeller Foundation Social Science Research Fellowship in Population Science for 1987-88, and he served as a visiting professor at the University of Zimbabwe and, in 1995, as senior Fulbright scholar at the University of Namibia. Adam was a prolific contributor to several important bodies of research. Indicative are his forthcoming publications which include work on the effects of age structure on the labor force in China, the relationship between HIV and socioeconomic status in Uganda, the effects of gender relations on family planning decisions in Kenya, the determinants of contraceptive use in Nepal, women's status and fertility outcomes in Kazakhstan. His research holds policy development implications for the coming decades.

Adam's recent work appeared in such journals as Rural Sociology, The Sociological Quarterly, Journal of Biosocial Sciences, International Sociology, Age and Ageing, and the Southern African Journal of Gerontology. Adam also worked tirelessly in departmental, university, and professional service (e.g., on editorial boards for Rural Sociology, the Southern African Journal of Gerontology, and the Rural Studies Series of the Rural Sociological Society). Adam also worked in Nigeria, Kenya, Namibia and Zimbabwe as a consultant for international organizations, including the Rockefeller Foundation, the Population Council, UNICEF, and the United Nations Population Fund. Last year, by invitation of the United Nations, he was a key participant in an International Conference on Population and Development meeting on Population and Ageing in Belgium. In early March, 2000, he taught a course on social gerontology in Malta for the United Nations Institute on Ageing.

He is survived by his wife, Susan Enea Adamchak in Manhattan, KS, his son, Nikolai Adamchak in Louisville, KY, and his father, two sisters, and two nieces, all in New York/New Jersey.

Adam will be missed by his colleagues and students at Kansas State University. We will miss his quick sense of humor, his working class, New Jersey directness, his professionalism, and his contributions to our individual lives and to the collective life of the department. He will also be missed by his former students, many of whom he remained in close contact, and by his professional colleagues around the world.

An endowed award, the Donald J. and Susan E. Adamchak Graduate Student Award in Demography, has been established in his memory at Bowling Green State University.

Robert Endleman (1923-1999)

Robert Endleman, professor emeritus of sociology at Adelphi University and a practicing psychoanalyst died at St. Luke's Hospital in New York City on December 14, 1999 after a long illness and series of strokes. He was born in Sudbury, Ontario on October 2, 1923, the third son of Lithuanian immigrants.

His father was a fur trader. Robert, as he preferred to be called in later life, attended the University of Toronto where he majored in sociology and modern languages. Like a number of other students in the 1940's, the best-known of whom was Erving Goffman, he was inspired by C.W.M. Hart, the major figure in the field at the time, to undertake graduate work in cultural anthropology. Accordingly, when Hart accepted an appointment at the University of Wisconsin, he followed him to Madison and earned an MA in 1947. He obtained his PhD at Harvard in 1955 in the new Department of Social Relations where he worked under the supervision of Clyde Kluckhohn. After a research position at the University of Chicago where he co-authored the NORC studies in human reactions to disaster and teaching appointments at the Universities of Minnesota and Illinois, Hofstra University and the State University of New York at Plattsburgh, he moved to Adelphi University in Garden City, Long Island, New York in 1961, and served as chair of the Department of Sociology from 1963 until 1969. He entered the Postdoctoral Program in Psychotherapy and Psychoanalysis at New York University in 1971 and received a certificate in 1976. In the winter of 1970 he was appointed a visiting professor at McGill University in Montreal, and in 1974 at the University of Haifa. He took retirement from Adelphi in 1991 to devote full-time to his writing and publishing pursuits—specifically, Psyche Press which he founded to facilitate the publication of research studies with a psychoanalytic orientation.

His colleagues and friends agree that Robert was no narrow academic, but was always bubbling with ideas in literature, art, music—he played the piano—politics, religion; always an interesting conversationalist at social gatherings. According to his associates at NYU he made valuable contributions to their programs and could always be counted on for an intelligent discussion of papers presented at psychoanalytic meetings. He could marshal arguments on all sides of a question, and, as one analyst put it, "he was fun to do battle with." Moreover, in the words of Ashakant Nimbark, he was "a convivial convention enthusiast, a socially busy bee, a perpetual party goer as well as party thrower."

Although his scholarship, in his words, focused on "personality-in-culture and social structure," he rejected the extreme cultural relativism and the revisionist Freudianism associated with this approach, preferring to align himself with such more "orthodox" Freudian anthropologists as Geza Roheim, George Devereux, and Weston LaBarre. The range of his applications of this perspective is best revealed in the titles of his books: Personality and Social Life (1967), a combined text and reader to which he contributed innovative essays relating human character structure to biological evolution and the origins of language and culture; Love and Sex in Twelve Cultures (1989), often adopted as a text for courses in sociology and anthropology; Psyche and Society: Explorations in Psychoanalytic Sociology (1981); Deviance and Psychopathology: The Sociology and Psychology of Outsiders (1990); Eros and Evolution: Prospects for Psychoanalytic Social Science: Race, Sexuality, and Collective Madness (1993); Relativism Under Fire: The Psychoanalytic Challenge (1995); No Fathers (1997). In addition to his ten books Robert published many articles and reviews in psychoanalytical, sociological, and anthropological journals. He also edited a newsletter entitled PASO, the acronym standing for "psychoanalytic approaches to social science." He belonged to a generation of sociologists with broadly interdisciplinary interests that is now regrettably passing. His efforts to integrate psychoanalysis, sociology, and anthropology were especially valuable and will be sorely missed since few scholars are presently continuing this intellectual tradition.

He is survived by two daughters, Julie G. Endleman of Manhattan, and Lezlie Weiner of Midlothian, VA; three grandsons; a sister, Gloria Fox of Manhattan; a brother, Donald Endleman of Port Perry, Ont.; a niece, Erica Fox of Atlanta, a nephew, Tom Endleman of Sudbury, Ont., and a cousin, Shalom Endleman of Totoket, CT.

Helen M. Hacker, Emerita Professor, Adelphi University; Dennis H. Wrong, Emeritus Professor, New York University

Addendum

I would like to add a personal note of appreciation to the above account. The fact that Robert often helped me in preparing feminist speeches with which he was not in sympathy is indicative of his kindness and capacity for friendship. One of his books in my library bears the inscription: "To Helen, beloved antagonist."

Julie A. Lam (1958-2000)

Julie A. Lam passed away on Friday, January 14, 2000 at the National Institute of Health in Bethesda, Maryland after a four-year battle with kidney cancer. She graduated from the University of Oklahoma with an MS in 1983 and received her PhD in Sociology from the University of Massachusetts-Amherst in 1988.

While a graduate student at University of Massachusetts, Julie studied with Peter Rossi and James Wright. She wrote her dissertation on the lives of homeless women. Upon graduation, Julie became the Associate Director of the Student Affairs Research and Evaluation Office at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. While there, she worked on projects related to college students, including acquaintance rape, sexual harassment, racial and ethnic harassment, and alcohol and drug use.

In 1991, Julie moved with her husband, Tom Hannon, to New Haven, Connecticut. While in New Haven, Julie managed Yale Medical School's National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism (NIAAA) demonstration project on services for homeless substance abusing men. She was a faculty member and associate research scientist at Yale University. She also served as a mentor and dissertation advisor to graduate students in the Department of Sociology. Since 1993, Julie was the Director of the Access Program on Homelessness at the North East Program Evaluation Center (NEPEC) at the Veteran's Administration in New Haven. At NEPEC, she worked closely with Robert Rosenheck on research assessing the needs of homeless veterans.

Julie is survived by her parents, Jess and Betty Lam, from Pauls Valley, Oklahoma; her sister, Jana, and brother, Jess; and her husband, Tom, and her two young children, Kathleen Ann Hannon and Stephen Patrick Hannon. She leaves behind a legacy of excellent sociological research on the service needs of homeless people that can be found in federal reports and published articles. If it is true that society will eventually be

Hylan G. Lewis (1912-2000)

Hylan Garnet Lewis, a sociologist and pioneer in the field of community studies who was active in public life and taught in New York for years, died on March 8 at a hospital in Versailles, France. He was 88, lived on Manhattan's Upper West Side and had been visiting France.

The death of Lewis, who was retired, was announced by the City University of New York Graduate Center, where he was a professor of sociology for two decades, beginning in 1977.

"Professor Lewis, in his research, teaching and leadership in public affairs, was a bright beacon that lit, and in a major way, helped to guide more than a half-century of American race relations," said Setsuko Matsunaga Nishi, a retired professor of sociology at Brooklyn College and the Graduate Center.

Lewis's 1955 book, Blackways of Kent is a study of a black community in the industrializing South. It has been called an exemplary early product of community studies, which examines the role of factors like race, job and economic status and family in joining people together.

He went on to direct, from 1959 to 1964, a child-rearing study carried out by the Health and Welfare Council in Washington. A key finding of the study was that poor black mothers in Washington had aspirations of success for their children that were just as high as those of all middle-class mothers. But the study found that the poor black mothers also had a realistic understanding of the obstacles—like racial prejudice, poverty and poor schools—that their children would face.

These findings were important and influential, because it had been widely thought at the time that these children had not been succeeding in life because their families had not set high goals.

Later, Lewis held posts in New York in which he analyzed, and sought remedies for, the problems of the poor and unemployed. He also studied discrimination against members of minorities in corporate employment, foster care and schools.

He was a senior associate at Kenneth B. Clark and Associates, a consulting firm led by Kenneth B. Clark, the noted psychologist and race-relations expert, which advised corporations, schools and other clients about racial integration.

After teaching at Howard University and in the South, Lewis was on the faculty of Brooklyn College from 1967 to 1977 and while teaching at the Graduate Center he also taught at Queens College from 1990 to 1992.

He was born in Washington, received a bachelor's degree in 1932 from Virginia Union University in Richmond, VA, and his doctorate in sociology in 1951 from the University of Chicago.

His 1953 marriage to Leighla Whipper ended in divorce.

He is survived by his companion, Francoise Burgess; his wife, the former Audrey Carter, from whom he had been separated for 26 years; a daughter, Carole Ione of Kingston, NY; a son, Guy, of Yreka, CA; three grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren and two sisters, Kathryn Garner and Elsie Lewis, both of Washington.

Floyd M. Martinson (1916-2000)

Floyd M. Martinson, 83, of St. Peter, Minnesota, died peacefully at his home on Easter Sunday, April 23, 2000.

Floyd was born November 12, 1916, to John and Mathilda Martinson in Grace Township, Chippewa County, Minnesota. A 1942 graduate of Concordia, he later earned masters and doctorate degrees from the University of Minnesota. He married Beatrice Awes on June 15, 1946, at St. John's Lutheran Church in Minneapolis.

From 1945 to 1982, Floyd was professor of sociology at Gustavus Adolphus College, where he taught and published in the areas of family sociology, sexuality, and social psychology. In 1982 he announced at the age of sixty-five that while he would no longer be teaching, he was not retiring. Indeed, Floyd never retired. Refusing the "Emeritus" title, he became Research Sociologist and continued to write and publish until his dying day. All told, he published fifty articles and chapters, and nine books and monographs, including Marriage and the American Ideal (1960), Growing Up in Norway, 800 to 1990 (1992), and The Sexual Life of Children (1994).

Floyd was a fellow of the American Sociological Association; a member of the Committee on Family Research, International Sociological Association; a member of the National Council on Family Relations; a member of the International Academy of Sex Research; a fellow, Society for the Scientific Study of Sex; an associate of the Sex Information and Education Council of the United States; a life member of the Midwest Sociological Association; and a member of the Minnesota Council on Family Relations. He was on the Editorial Advisory Board and was consulting Editor for the Journal of Sex Research.

He organized and chaired "The Child and the Family", the Sixteenth International Seminar, Committee on Family Research, International Sociological Association. He organized and convened the Symposium on Infant and Child Sexuality, International Conference on Love and Attraction, University of Swansea, Wales, UK. He was a visiting scientist and consultant on infant and child sexuality at the Center for Studies in Child and Family Mental Health at the National Institute of Mental Health in Washington, DC. And he was guest lecturer at Vaxjo, Sweden; University of Oslo; Uppsala University; University of Bergen, Norway; University of Geneva, Switzerland; Psykiatrisk Klinik, Copenhagen, Denmark; Lund University, Sweden; University of Trondheim, Norway; and the Norwegian Association of Clinical Sexology, Oslo, Norway.

In 1988 he was the recipient of the Alfred C. Kinsey Award; in 1980 he received a Fulbright Research Scholarship and an award from the Society for the Scientific Study of Sex.

Beyond academia Floyd was active in the life of the Lutheran church: LCA Commission on Marriage; Board of Directors, Lutheran Social Service of Minnesota; Minnesota Council of Churches, Department of Christian Social Relations; Board of Managers and Chairman of the Department of Social Action; Pastoral Counseling Committee, Minnesota Synod; Committee on the Role of Lutheran Social Welfare in Strengthening the Family, National Lutheran Council; Commission on the Impact of Social Change on the Family, National Conference on Churches and Social Work; and the Board of Christian Service and Board of Youth Activities, Lutheran Minnesota Conference.

During Floyd's long career he studied and taught in subject areas that were beyond the mainstream, even controversial. Students of the 1940s and 1950s appreciated his frank and open discussions of sexuality until the 1960s eventually began to catch up with him. Colleagues learned from him the importance of academic freedom and tenure. From outside the academy came opposition to the subject areas he was opening up. In the early days, some of those complaints were brought to the college President, who would turn the letters over to Floyd, with the instruction: "You take care of this." More recently Floyd's investigations into childhood sexuality have raised eyebrows—just last year a letter came from across the seas asking whether Floyd's 1994 book represented "the official position of the college or the department". More often, however, Floyd's work has been favorably cited in the press by progressive columnists fighting the tides of prejudice and popular culture.

As a man about campus, Floyd carried far more than his share of natural dignity and grace, and he dressed better than Johnny Carson. A chance encounter would get you a pat on the back, a pep talk, whatever was necessary. He will be missed by all who knew him.

Archibald Ward (1912-2000)

Archibald Ward, 88, a sociologist and former Baptist minister who worked for St. Elizabeth's Hospital for nearly 25 years before retiring in 1985, died of congestive heart failure April 21 at his home in Clinton.

Ward joined the hospital in 1961 as a research chaplain and later became research sociologist before retiring as forensic division training director at St. Elizabeths. He also served as president of the St. Elizabeths Medical Society.

In addition to his work at the hospital, he served as an associate clinical professor at George Washington University medical school. He also lectured at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond and at the College of William and Mary.

Ward, a North Carolina native, was a graduate of North Carolina State University and the Crozer Theological Seminary, which was then located in Pennsylvania. He received a doctorate in sociology from the University of Maryland.

From 1937 to 1942, he served as pastor of Calvary Baptist Church in Towson. After that he left the Washington area. He held such posts as Baptist church pastor and hospital chaplain before returning to this area to join St. Elizabeths.

In retirement, Ward volunteered for the Prince George's County Health Department and the county's Family Services Department. He also served on the Citizen's Advisory Committee for the Patuxent Institution. His hobbies included gardening and photography. He practiced yoga.

His marriage to Courtney Ward ended in divorce. Survivors include his wife of 40 years, Sue Fryer Ward of Clinton, and their two daughters, Beth Ione Ward of Northampton, MA and Lucille Ward Walker of St. Inigo; two children from his first marriage, Anne Ward Little and John Archibald Ward, both of Williamsburg; and four grandchildren.

Call for Submissions

Promoting the Success of Students of Color

The American Association for Higher Education (AAHE) in collaboration with the American Sociological Association (ASA) seeks submissions for a volume on pedagogical and curricular strategies that promote success among students of color in sociology courses. The volume will be part of a larger AAHE project Promoting the Success of Students of Color in the Disciplines (see April issue of Footnotes for a description of the project). Catherine White Berheide (Skidmore College), Jeffrey Chin (Le Moyne College) and Dennis Rome (Indiana University) will edit the Sociology volume.

The volumes will focus on pedagogical and curricular strategies, both what is taught/learned and how, including how we assess teaching/learning. The particular emphasis of the volumes is on introductory and gateway courses to the undergraduate major, while also addressing the larger departmental, institutional, and disciplinary contexts in which teaching and learning occur. The purpose of the volumes is:

- to encourage conversations about inclusive teaching and learning and the importance of larger diversity issues in different disciplines
- to provide faculty in specific disciplines with concrete teaching and learning strategies to promote the success of students of color in gateway courses to the major in that discipline
- to encourage disciplinary action on behalf of removing barriers to student success

For the Sociology volume, we seek articles that address the following types of questions:

- What are the barriers to success for students of color in introductory and gateway courses in sociology?
- What are the pedagogical and curricular strategies that break down those barriers? Which strategies can be used in which types of courses? In which types of institutions? With which groups of students? How and what do these strategies accomplish? How do we know they work?
- What are the larger departmental, institutional, and discipline-wide actions needed to promote the success of students of color?
- In what ways has sociology made strides in this area? What pedagogical, curricular, and theoretical work still needs to be done? What further research/data collection is needed? How can sociology learn from/contribute to other disciplines' work in this area?
- What resources can sociology faculty and departments draw on to better promote student of color success?

We are looking for pedagogical, empirical, and theoretical pieces as well as resources that address these questions. Specifically, we seek:

Pedagogical Pieces that describe concrete strategies that sociology faculty can use in their courses, chairs can use in their departments, and the discipline can use in its programs. These should be strategies that promote student of color success in introductory and gateway sociology courses in particular, and the larger discipline as a whole. They may describe programmatic strategies (such as MOST, service learning, undergraduate research opportunities, etc.). The articles should include a discussion of assessment or evidence that the strategies work.

Empirical Pieces that analyze the participation and success of students of color in sociology; evaluate courses, programs, or departments in sociology; assess effects on students, etc. The articles may be based on case studies, student surveys, in-depth interviews, focus groups, and the like. They may examine the overall curriculum or department or they may focus on specific courses, such as introductory sociology, statistics, or race.

Theoretical Pieces that analyze the issue of student of color success in sociology. How does sociological theory frame this issue? What sociological research informs this discussion? Why are these issues important to sociology? In what way does/can sociology speak to these issues?

Resources that faculty can draw on to continue their work in this area. These may include syllabi, exercises, assessment tools, etc.

We seek submissions that reflect a diversity of institutional types, understand the diversity of students of color, and include student voices.

The deadline for completed articles will be early fall. Send abstracts of proposed papers by June 23, 2000 to: Catherine White Berheide, Department of Sociology, Anthropology, and Social Work, Skidmore College, 815 N. Broadway, Saratoga Springs, NY 12866; (518) 580-5415 office; (518) 580-5411 department; (518) 580-5429 fax; e-mail cberheid@skidmore.edu.

Article submissions are limited to 1,000 words and must have journalistic value (e.g., timeliness, significant impact, general interest) rather than be research-oriented or scholarly in nature. Submissions will be reviewed by the editorial board for possible publication. "Public Forum" contributions are limited to 800 words; "Obituaries," 500 words; "Letters to the Editor," 400 words; "Department" announcements, 200 words. All submissions should include a contact name and, if possible, an e-mail address. ASA reserves the right to edit for style and length all material published. The deadline for all material is the first of the month preceding publication (e.g., February 1 for March issue).

Send communications on material, subscriptions, and advertising to: American Sociological Association, 1307 New York Avenue, Suite 700, Washington, DC 20005-4701; (202) 383-9005; fax (202) 638-0882; e-mail footnotes@asanet.org; http://www.asanet.org.
